Truman Asks Food Saving To Help Hungry Abroad; Hopes to Avoid Congress Call

Democrats Have Lost The Peace, Taft Asserts

Limits Defined For Future GOP Cooperation on Foreign Policy

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Tacoma, Wash., Sept. 25.—Senator Robert A. Taft tonight gave the Marshall Plan a measured indorsement but drew boundaries around the field of future bipartisan foreign policy cooperation.

He charged Administration foreign policy failures in the past have already lost the peace and "created a situation as bad or worse than that which existed before the war."

Taft laid down seven "general principles" as the touchstone to GOP foreign policy and urged Republicans to "cooperate in measures which do not violate those principles."

Follows Middle Course

His speech put him right in the middle of his party's international and isolationist extremes. It boiled down to this:

"Congress should hesitate to interfere with the President's foreign policy, unless it involves us in the danger of an unnecessary war, or proposes to drain to an unreasonable degree the resources of our taxpayers and the product of our labor."

It was Taft's first comprehensive foreign policy statement. The Senate Republican leader, now canvassing his chances for the GOP nomination, proposed "about four years" tapering Marshall Plan assistance to Europe.

The four billion dollars budgeted this year for foreign shipments should be gradually lowered, he said.

Money Not Enough

"I do not believe that America can save the world with money," he continued. "We can only help the world to save itself if it wishes to be saved and makes its utmost effort."

Driving here from Seattle, where he tipped his foreign-policy hand by indorsing limited assistance to Europe to check the spread of communism, the still undeclared candidate made Tacoma a one-day stop.

But to many his Temple Theater speech here tonight, injecting foreign policy performance into the campaign, was the highlight of his Western trip.

He described Roosevelt-Truman policies in Russia as "too soft," our initial German program as one of "vengeance" rather than economic reconstruction and charged "fatal mistakes" at Tehran, Yalta and Potsdam.

Taft proposed perfecting the United Nations without Russia, along lines of the inter-American regional pattern, if Russia refuses "real participation," but said he has not abandoned hope of some agreement with Russia.

Eliminate Communism at Home

"I have not felt—for the present at least—that Russia desires a fighting war, or would give serious consideration to it," he said.

"I do feel that Russia desires to make communism the accepted form of government, both in occupied territories and throughout the world."

Attributing Russian occupation and domination of much of Europe and Asia to Administration concessions and "complete misconception of the whole Russian character and the character of communism," he termed communism a "curious form of aggression."

"We should meet communism first here in the United States, bring it out into the open and eliminate its influence," he said. "If we can't meet it successfully at home, how can we hope to meet it in Europe?"

Time and again Taft praised the foreign policy leadership of Sena-

Russia Indicates Veto on Italy if U. N. Bars Her Satellites

By Robert Bruskin
Post Reporter

Lake Success, N. Y., Sept. 25.—Russia today gave the Security Council an all-or-none choice, indicating she would again veto admission of Italy to the United Nations unless her three Balkan satellites were also admitted.

Andrei Gromyko gave his clew to the intended veto at a meeting of the Security Council called to consider Italy's application which he vetoed on August 21.

This time Gromyko announced the Soviets favored Italy's admission, but he made it conditional upon the acceptance of Hungary, Romania, Bulgaria and Finland as well.

Australia's delegate, Col. W. R. Hodgson, declared Gromyko's attitude "savors of blackmail." Sir Alexander Cadogan of Britain protested that the proposal "sounds like something rather commonly and vulgarly known as a horse trade."

Herschel V. Johnson, of the United States, and most other members of the Council insisted that each of the five applicants must be considered separately because conditions in each were different.

Gromyko, who presided, conceded in the face of all the opposition that the Council could vote on each of the five individual, but he

38-6 Count Proves Soviet Cannot Block Border Peace Effort

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.

Lake Success, N. Y., Sept. 25.—The first test vote on the Greek issue late today showed that the United States had overwhelming support in the 55-Nation Assembly for its efforts to stop the guerilla warfare along the Greek border.

The vote came in the Assembly's Political Committee, with Secretary of State George C. Marshall looking on from a back seat among the American delegation advisers. It dealt with a secondary issue, but it proved that this time Russia and her friends would not be allowed to block the proceedings.

The vote recorded the opinion of the Political Committee that Bulgaria and Albania should agree in advance to settle their differences with Greece by peaceful means before being invited, as nonmembers of the United Nations, to take part in the coming debate.

Russia and her friends resisted strenuously. One Russian-bloc speaker after another argued that to impose any such advance pledge upon the two northern neighbors of Greece would be to deny them a hearing.

Massed Latin-American and western European votes, however, overwhelmed the Russians. The result

Unions Given To Oct. 31 on Financial Data

Date Is Extended To Qualify for NLRB Privileges

By Dillard Stokes
Post Reporter

Labor unions yesterday were given until October 31 to meet the Taft-Hartley requirements on financial statements.

By then, unions that wish to keep their standing in the National Labor Relations Board must certify that statements have gone out to their membership.

This gives time for the statements to be considered when labor's Taft-Hartley policy is drafted by the AFL convention in San Francisco Monday week, and the CIO convention in Boston on October 13.

Affidavit Deadline Extended

Union officers who ask for delay have until October 31, too, to swear they are not Communists. If they do not ask, their unions are due to lose their standing this week.

All CIO unions and most others have already published financial statements but whether they want to comply with the rigid requirements of the Taft-Hartley Act—which says every member must have a copy—would be a policy question for the conventions.

In like manner, anti-Communists like John L. Lewis, president of the mine workers, and Philip Murray, head of the CIO, balked at filing the non-Communist oaths.

Act Called Un-American

They said it was un-American, was a violation of their civil rights and was unfair, pointing out that employers are not required to take such an oath.

Officers of Lewis' District 50 have said they will not even ask for the delay until October 31 but will let their NLRB cases be thrown out.

The Taft-Hartley Act says no union shall have any rights before the NLRB until all its officers take the oath and the NLRB counsel, Robert N. Denham, ruled that all CIO and AFL officers must take it as well, or the international unions in their federations would lose their NLRB standing.

After this ruling, UMW President Lewis, by refusing to swear when most of the AFL council wanted to, single handed kept the whole AFL out of the NLRB.

Most of the CIO officers were against taking the oath.

Hanns Eisler's Visa Blamed on Consular Slip

All Mrs. Roosevelt's Efforts to Aid Him Failed, Littell Says

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

The strange case of how Hanns Eisler, self-admitted former German Communist, managed to get a permanent visa to stay in the United States, remained a mystery yesterday which drew the fire of a former assistant attorney general of the United States.

Norman M. Littell, former assistant attorney general, counsel for former Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles and for George S. Messersmith, former Assistant Secretary of State, said all of Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt's efforts on behalf on Eisler were fruitless.

Eisler actually got into the United States, Littell said, because he "caught a sleepy consular officer in the small town of Mexicali (in Mexico) off guard."

Statement Given Press

Littell's statement was given to the press after Messersmith had faced a day's quizzing before the House Committee on Un-American Activities which is investigating Eisler's entrance into this country.

Messersmith was accused of having changed his opinion about admitting Eisler after Mrs. Roosevelt wrote to Sumner Welles of her interest in the case, a charge which he vehemently denied.

"Neither Sumner Welles, nor George Messersmith, nor anyone else in the State Department at Washington, D. C., was even aware, at the time, of Hanns Eisler's admittance to the United States at Mexicali on the California-Mexican borderline on September 20, 1940," Littell declared.

"The truth is that Hanns Eisler, having failed to get through the center of the line, first through the American consul general of Havana and then in Mexico City, made a surprise run around left end and caught a sleepy consular officer in the small town of Mexicali off guard. This officer granted Eisler a visa."

Identified as Meyer

The officer was identified by Littell as Willis Meyer, who is nearing retirement age in the Foreign Service.

Littell sharply challenged Robert E. Stripling, committee counsel,

Two persons died of traffic injuries yesterday in Greater Washington, one of them an Arlington bride, who was struck by a car Sunday as she returned from her honeymoon.

She was Mrs. Margaret Pettit Ellis, 45, of 3314 S. First st., Arlington. She died at 2:45 a. m. yesterday in Arlington Hospital.

The second traffic victim was Harry H. Fuller, 72, of Milford, Ohio, who became the District's fifty-fourth traffic victim of the year when he was struck by an automobile at 14th and K sts. nw. at about 1:25 p. m.

Mrs. Ellis and her husband, Joseph, 60, were married Thursday, September 18, and were returning home from a honeymoon trip to Baltimore when the fatal accident occurred.

Arlington County Police said the couple alighted from a bus on Lee hwy. opposite the Colonial Gardens Cemetery and were both struck by a car driven by Army Capt. Joseph M. Gold, jr., 30, of 5940 N. 10th rd., Arlington.

Mrs. Ellis' injuries included lacerations of the brain, a fractured skull and a fractured left leg. Her husband's condition was reported as "fair" yesterday at the hospital.

Mrs. Ellis is survived by two sons from a previous marriage, George and Alvin Pettit, jr., of Falls Church, Va., and five sisters, Mrs. T. M. Inscoe, Mrs. Beatrice Spitz, Mrs. Mattie Grigsby, Mrs. Edith Sunday and Mrs. Everett Stephenson, and three brothers, George

Decline Seen In Wholesale Price Index

New Postwar Peak Set Last Week With Food at All-Time High

Meat Prices Drop

Grain Action Hit

Wholesale prices set a new postwar peak last week, the Bureau of Labor Statistics reported yesterday. Prices of food and farm products reached a new all-time high.

However, although the wholesale price index was 27.7 per cent above a year ago and 80.9 per cent above 1939, BLS reported that at the end of the week it was dropping. Next week's report, it indicated, may show a distinct drop.

Yesterday saw little change in the Nation's food markets. Early in the session grains went down, only to rally after announcement by President Truman that exports would total around 475 million bushels.

Grain Strategy Criticized

Two members of Mr. Truman's newly appointed Citizens Food Committee made news during the day in connection with the domestic price situation.

Harry Bullis, president of General Mills Corp., attacked the Government's effort to beat down prices of grain futures by increasing margin requirements by the Nation's grain exchanges.

"If the liquidity of the market is destroyed," Bullis said, "the miller will have to protect himself by making a large markup in the goods which he sells."

Special Session Urged

CIO President Philip Murray, another member of the President's committee, made public a letter in which he asked Mr. Truman to call a special session of Congress. He suggested that the Chief Executive ask Congress to "impose full taxes on extortionate profits."

Cargill, Inc., Minneapolis grain brokers, declared that the shrinkage in this year's corn crop and a reduction in subsoil moisture during the dry, hot summer, means that this country can export safely only 250 million bushels of wheat instead of the 400 millions planned by the Cabinet Food Committee.

Stop-Gap Funds For Italy, France To Be Sought By Other Means

(Text of President's Statement on Page 17)

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

President Truman's reluctance to call Congress back for a special session is based largely on the fact that so many Senators and Representatives are overseas.

Scores of them, members of various investigating committees, are now in Europe and Asia, checking on conditions first-hand.

Mr. Truman, it was learned last night, thinks that this globe-trotting by American lawmakers is a good thing for the country. He feels that they will gather an invaluable background of facts, which they will be able to share with their stay-at-home colleagues on Capitol Hill.

Momentous Debate Ahead

Apparently, Mr. Truman is looking ahead to the time when Congress will start one of the most momentous debates in United States history, the debate on the Marshall Plan for permanent recovery of Europe. This is expected to continue into the spring of '48.

Some of the Senators and Representatives who are now in Europe appear to have revised many of the opinions they held before crossing the Atlantic. They have indicated that they share the Administration's view about the importance of helping friendly European countries to resist Communist expansion.

At any rate, President Truman is hopeful that stop-gap aid for France and Italy can be provided without calling Congress back in advance of the regular session starting January 3.

Estimates of Needs Vary

Britain, it is believed, can get along for the time being on the remainder of the American loan.

Various estimates have been made as to the amount of dollars France and Italy need to buy American food and fuel during the stop-gap period. Some are very high. Well-posted officials, however, said last night that a sum between a half billion and three quarters of a billion dollars ought to suffice.

Mr. Truman hopes that some way can be found to raise this sum without going to Capitol Hill.

Reluctant as Mr. Truman is to call Congress back, it was obvious yesterday that he had not yet worked out any program of stop-gap relief that could be put into effect without congressional approval.

The indications were that this might also be the situation when the Chief Executive meets with Republican and Democratic leaders Monday.

Chairman of New Committee

American People Will Solve Food Crisis, Luckman Declares

Cambridge, Mass., Sept. 25 (AP).—Charles Luckman, newly appointed chairman of President Truman's food committee, said today he had "absolute confidence" the people of the United States would solve the world food crisis through voluntary cooperation.

Explaining that the function of his committee would be of an advisory nature, the head of Lever Brothers Soap Co., said the President expects it "to contribute guidance to the Government itself."

He said he had been assured his committee would not be influenced by any political group or faction, adding that he would not otherwise have accepted the post.

Reminded in an interview that Lever Brothers used large quantities of fats, Luckman said he expected the company would be among the first to suffer if business should be called upon to curtail consumption.

"If it becomes necessary, and it may very well be," he said, "that business must suffer that the people may not, I would have no hesitation in demanding that this come about. Business exists only so that the people may live and there never has been a healthy business economy when the people were hungry."

When asked if there would be any political complexion to distribution of food abroad, Luckman said his only problem would be to "get the food together for export, to make it available," and that he would have no part in its distribution.

Luckman said yesterday was "the first time the President spoke to me" (about the appointment), and that it took him by surprise. He said he would fly to Washington Monday and that he expected to devote most of his time until the end of the year to the food problem.

Luckman, at 38 one of the highest salaried executives in the country, was born in Kansas City, Mo., and is a graduate of the University of Illinois.

Lever Brothers, a Maine corporation, describes itself as an independent affiliate of the Dutch and British organizations of that name.

Crisis Is Worse Than Year Ago Because of World Crop Shortages

(Text of Cabinet Committee's Report on Page 3)

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

President Truman yesterday called upon America to "waste less food" so that more will be available for export to needy countries overseas.

He then appointed a 26-man Citizens Food Committee, headed by Charles Luckman of Cambridge, Mass., president of Lever Brothers, soap manufacturers, "to advise on ways and means of carrying out the necessary conservation effort."

The first meeting of the committee will be Wednesday at the White House, Luckman later announced.

In making his announcement, Mr. Truman read a report on the present world food crisis from the Cabinet Committee on World Food Programs.

Adverse Crop Developments

"Adverse crop developments," the President quoted the committee as reporting, "including those of recent weeks, both in North America and in Europe, make apparent a food shortage even worse than a year ago.

"The losses from heavy frosts in Northwestern Europe last winter have been increased by a general European drought this spring and summer.

"Any significant cut in the already low rations in those countries will have most serious consequences for their rehabilitation."

The President then added that "the report shows that, without further action, we would be able to carry through a large export program; but as a result of sharply reduced corn production and continued high domestic demand for grain, exports would not equal last year's total shipments—even though world's needs are greater.

Domestic Adjustment Needed

"The United States cannot rest on this export prospect," Mr. Truman asserted. "To ship more abroad without adjustment in domestic demand however, would aggravate our own price situation."

In announcing his Citizens Food Committee and outlining its goal, Mr. Truman addressed the following appeal t othe American people:

"There is one immediate and personal thing each of us can do.

"We can start now to conserve by being more selective in foods we buy, particularly livestock products whose production requires large quantities of grain.

"Such action on our part will do two things. We will save on our family budget and we will help others who are in desperate need.

Confident of Cooperation

"I am confident that the American people, realizing the extreme seriousness of the situation, will cooperate fully."

The Cabinet committee's adjusted food export plans call for a drop of about 100 million bushels of grain as compared with last year.

The committee proposed leaving wheat shipments at about the same —400 million bushels, but decreased other grains, such as corn, oats, barley, rye and grain sorghums, from 175 million bushels to 70 million.

"It is obvious, the committee said, "that the United States will

More Powerful Atom Energy Pile Planned

Intensified Effort For Industrial Uses Is Announced

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Plans for construction of a new atomic energy pile more powerful than that at Oak Ridge, Tenn., were revealed yesterday by the Atomic Energy Commission.

At the same time, the commission said it would intensify efforts to apply atomic energy to industry and engineering.

These details were included in an announcement that Clinton Laboratories at Oak Ridge would be operated by the University of Chicago, assisted by 14 Southern universities in the Oak Ridge Institute for Nuclear Studies and a score of industries. Previously operated by the Monsanto Chemical Co., the enterprise will be renamed the Clinton National Laboratory and will become the third in the commission's national laboratories.

As one of its major projects, the commission listed "design and construction of a new high-flux reactor several times more powerful than the existing Oak Ridge pile for further studies and expanded research requiring neutron intensities not now available."

Further major projects for the Clinton laboratory were:

1. Continued production of radioisotopes.
2. Applied research in connection with other activities of the commission and fundamental nuclear research.
3. Continued studies to develop

Top Command Of Air Force All Appointed

Barrows, 2 Others Named Secretaries; Spaatz Chief of Staff

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

President Truman yesterday completed organization of the new Department of Air Force with the appointment of the remainder of its high command.

To assist Secretary W. Stuart Symington in running the U. S. Air Force, the President named:

Arthur S. Barrows, of Chicago, former president of Sears, Roebuck & Co., to be Undersecretary.

Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney, an Air Force officer in both World Wars, and Eugene M. Zuckert, special assistant to Symington for the past year, to be Assistant Secretaries. Both are New Yorkers.

General Carl Spaatz, commanding general of the Army Air Forces, to be chief of staff of the separate air force.

At the same time, Mr. Truman appointed Dr. Vannevar Bush of Washington to be chairman of the new Research and Development Board. Bush has been chairman of the old Joint Research and Development Board and the nomination simply continues him in the reorganized agency.

Delay in Dr. Bush's designation had lead to speculation that someone else would be named to the post. The White House yesterday made public a letter President Truman sent Bush praising his wartime research work and expressing his gratification that the scientist was "willing to continue in the public service."

Later in the day, Symington an-

Humor Oils Troubled Waters Of Presidency, Truman Says

(Bank Commissioners hear Eccles discuss aiding Europe. Page 11)

By The Associated Press

President Truman said yesterday that "if you don't have a good sense of humor, you're in a hell of a fix" when you are President of the United States and have to work from 5 o'clock in the morning to 11 o'clock at night.

State bank commissioners, who took time out from their convention here to visit the White House, heard him say that and laughed loudly when he told them he always got "the jitters when I have to talk to a banker."

In an informal, jocular mood, Mr. Truman alternately kept the commissioners laughing and listening intently as he switched from humorous experiences to serious references about the Nation's finances.

He told his audience in the rose garden that in touring the White House they had just been in the "finest prison in the world."

Presidents, he added, are prisoners of the public, but most of them like it.

He told about going down to a Washington bank and coming out to find traffic blocked in four directions by persons who realized he was there.

He told about sitting on the portico of the White House and deciding to take a look at a ball game of sandlot players just outside the grounds. He said he walked across the lawn, accompanied by some police and Secret Servicemen.

"When I got there," he grinned, "the ball game broke up and they came to peek through the fence at me."

On the serious side, Mr. Truman said:

The United States is "about the only country not immediately threatened with inflation," but it can easily arrive here if "we don't tend to our knittin'."

Keeping our finances in balance is more important than anything except feeding the hungry and the hungry can't be fed unless we keep our credit sound.

A great record has been made through the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation setup. He added that he knew he shouldn't brag, but he had been informed there had been fewer failures in the years since deposit insurance became effective than there used to be in a week.

He said that shows the bank commissioners must be doing a good job to "keep this thing on an even keel."

Laborites Throw Full Power Of Socialism Into Hemline War

London, Sept. 25 (U.P.).—The Labor government declared war on the French long skirt today and British designers pitched into the battle with a "top secret weapon" which they said would place milady's legs on visible, although modest, display.

Sir Stafford Cripps, president of the Board of Trade, fired the first official shot in the battle of the hemline. He urged at a designers luncheon that British women take the offensive before their legs are overrun by Paris fashions.

"The shorter the skirt the better, though there must be some limits introduced by other considerations," Cripps said.

Cripps did not elaborate on these considerations. Other speakers for the government and designers said the English feminine leg would be in public evidence almost to the knee.

Henry Scott, chairman of the British Guild of Creative Designers, said British designers had a "secret weapon" which would penetrate the satin curtains in the fashion salons of Paris and New York.

"We are introducing a 'spiral'—but that is top secret," Scott whispered, happily

Observers speculated the "spiral," like the pin-striped suit, might suggest an appearance of length while satisfying the government's desire to save material, milady of the well-proportioned limb and milord of the discerning eye.

The British press sounded the call to arms, or rather legs, earlier today. The Laborite newspaper Daily Herald proclaimed the designer of long skirts a tool of big business, opposing the workingman's wife and daughter.

"It is outrageous nonsense," the newspaper cried.

have to put more emphasis on shipment of foodstuffs other than grain."

Cuban Sugar Suggested

Among these it suggested "substantial quantities of Cuban sugar." The committee then went off into a technical discussion of food costs per caloric value.

Wheat, flour, coarse grains, dry peas, lard and edible oils and Cuban sugar, it said, cost at present prices from $2 to $5 per 100,000 calories.

Such foods as might be substituted for grains in exports abroad cost far more per calorie, the report indicated. For instance it mentioned milled rice, dry beans, dried prunes, raisins, peanuts and nonfat dry milk solids as possible substitutes for grain, but pointed out they cost $5 to $10 per 100,000 calories.

The report called upon the deficit countries to "make the most effective use of their indigenous production by strengthening their collection and distribution systems, and spreading carefully all available supplies over the full 12 months period.

Hoover Missing From List

The Citizens' Food Committee the President named is similar to the Famine Emergency Committee that carried on a campaign of food conservation during a famine emergency 18 months ago. One name is missing from the new list, that of former President Herbert Hoover, who served in 1946 as honorary chairman of FEC.

The new committee is twice the size of the old FEC. Five of the members served on the 13-man committee a year ago. They are Chester C. Davis, president of the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis, who was chairman of FEC; Eugene Meyer, chairman of the board of The Washington Post; Justin Miller, president of the National Association of Broadcasters; William I. Zinsmaster, chairman, American Bakers Association, Duluth, Minn.

Other Americas Invited

The President made plain that other American countries, particularly in Latin America, will be invited to join in extending food aid.

He also added that the baking industry had promised cooperation. To a question about returning to rationing or price control, he suggested that his questioner ask Congress about that.

The value of a conservation program joined in by all the people was emphasized when the President said that Americans throw away enough bread to account for 70 million bushels of wheat a year.

The President told his listeners that some European nations are scraping the bottom of the barrel, and that it is not possible for us to let people starve and freeze if we can help it.

The question of meatless days, the President indicated, was one for the Citizens' Committee to discuss.

Dollar Supply Nearly Gone, France Warns

Paris, Sept. 25 (AP).— A Foreign Ministry spokesman said tonight that French dollar resources will be exhausted within a month and France will have to halt all dollar purchases if financial aid from the United States is not received soon.

The entire future of French economic recovery will be compromised if aid is not received in October, the spokesman added.

"Help in November or December will be too late," he declared.

In view of the nation's dwindling dollar resources, the French government canceled all dollar purchases except wheat, coal and fats August 26. Even these vitally needed supplies will have to be eliminated if France is unable to replenish her dollar supply within a month, the spokesman said.

Premier Paul Ramadier and Finance Minister Robert Schuman put these "bald facts" before United States Secretary of the Treasury John W. Snyder early this week, the spokesman said.

There is little hope, he said, of France's obtaining a 250 million dollar loan she requested from the International Bank.

If the government were forced to curtail imports of bread grain, he said, there would be little chance of maintaining the current 7¾ ounch daily bread ration.

Russia still has not replied to a recent French request for 1,500,000 tons of grain, the spokesman said, but negotiations with Argentina for 200,000 tons are "progressing favorably."

Africa Accused of U. N. Snub

Lake Success, Sept. 25 (AP).—Yugoslavia and India accused South Africa today of ignoring wishes of the United Nations Assembly in her refusal to submit a trusteeship agreement for the territory of Southwest Africa.

Harry G. Lawrence of South Africa told the current Assembly's 55-nations trusteeship committee his government was "under no legal agreement" to propose such an arrangement despite the 1946 Assembly's recommendation that it do so. He said such agreements "should be on a voluntary basis." Lawrence asserted South Africa would maintain her League of Nations mandate over Southwest Africa.

V. Ribnikar of Yogoslavia described this announcement as "flagrant violation—flagrant disobedience of the Assembly." He said South Africa's refusal to follow Assembly recommendations would "jeopardize the whole authority to the United Nations." He denied the validity of a referendum which South Africa said showed Southwest Africa was content to remain under the mandate.

Sir Maharaj Singhi of India charged South Africa with "persistent refusal" to follow Assembly recommendations, with "flouting the desires of the Assembly" and with "persistent breach" of U. N. principles. He said he would ask the committee later to "decide what action to take in this matter."

Sir Maharaj declared that South Africa "gives no political rights worth mentioning to any non-European" in Southwest Africa.

China, Poland, the Philippines and Guatemala also opposed South Africa's stand. John Foster Dulles of the United States termed it "regrettable" and said he would ask the Assembly to "keep open its request" for the trusteeship agreement. He expressed belief, however, that the Assembly's power was "a moral—not a legal—power."

Only the Netherlands supported the South African position. No decision was reached.

Trieste Normal; Blast in Milan

Rome, Sept. 25 (U.P.).—Three men and a woman attacked Communist headquarters in Milan with high explosives and funfire today, evidently in reaction to the Communist three-week campaign to topple the government. No one was injured.

In Rome, Guiseppe Saragat, leader of the right wing of the Socialist Party, introduced to the National Assembly the third leftist motion of nonconfidence in Premier Alcide de Gasperi's moderate Christian Democrat government.

The assembly set Friday for the start of debate on the three motions.

The attackers planted a charge of TNT near the right pillar of the building entrance and retired to a safe distance toawait the explosion. The building custodian, Guiseppe Farina, discovered the bomb and rushed to remove it. The attackers opened fire with pistols, forcing him to fall flat.

The blast ripped a hole in the entrance measuring 6 by 3 feet, shattered the stairs between the first and third floors, wrecked the library and custodian's room at the sides of the entrance and broke almost all the windows on the first two floors.

Trieste, Sept. 25 (AP).—Conditions in Trieste returned to normal today after more than a week of labor troubles and political agitation which greeted the birth of the free territory.

Full schedule work was resumed at the port, shipyards, gas works and other industries after the one-day general strike called by the Communist-dominated Sindacati Uniti. The strike ended at midnight last night after the Allied Military Government agreed to reinstate all suspended union members in their jobs, including those who had tried to take over a shipyard by raising the red flag.

However, the military government announced that nine members of Sindacati Unici arrested yesterday would be arraigned before a military government court tomorrow. They will be charged with assault and intimidation of members of the opposing pro-Italian Union, Camera Del Lavoro, a non-Communist organization, which did not support the strike. The trial is expected to begin Monday or Tuesday.

The military government let it be known its claim to victory was the fact that for the first time since Trieste free territory came into being, September 15, all is quiet.

Britain to Oppose Pay Hikes

London, Sept. 25 (INS).—The British Cabinet decided today to stand firm against widespread labor demands for higher wages.

The cabinet's decision came amid spreading coal strikes, which now have made 13,208 men idle and affected 43 pits, and a worsening fuel shortage.

Extent of the shortage was indicated by the Admiralty's announcement that the home fleet is canceling its annual autumn cruise and will carry out its exercises at Portland, home base, "because of the urgent necessity to save fuel."

One bright spot appeared on the economic horizon. It was the agreement of Smithfield market drivers to return to their jobs tomorrow, along with suspended workers, and the withdrawal of troops who have been delivering struck meat supplies since Saturday.

Another small ray of hope appeared in the gloomy coal situation when workers at eight pits in the Blantyre area, storm center of the strike, decided tonight to return to their jobs Tuesday following appeals by union leaders.

Text of Cabinet Committee's Report on Food Situation

Here is the text of the Cabinet Committee's report on the food situation made yesterday to President Truman:

September 22, 1947.

IT IS now generally known that the world food shortage is even worse than it was a year ago. Storms and floods last winter, followed by droughts this summer, have taken a heavy toll of crops in many important food - importing countries. Grain harvests in France, Italy, and other European countries are substantially below last year. Production prospects for potatoes, sugar beets, pulses, and fodder crops have been lowered in central and western Europe. Much of this deterioration in world food production has taken place in the last 30 to 60 days.

As a result of these conditions, the gap between available exports and minimum needs of the importing countries is estimated at about 15 per cent—or 4.5 million tons—in terms of grain alone. It was hoped earlier that increased local production of other foods might serve to reduce this gap, but the recent declines in crop prospects in these deficit areas make it clear that this hope is now lost.

This situation in the deficit areas points up the direct obligation that rests upon the United States, along with all other exporting countries, to do everything possible to make up the inevitable shortages. There is no need to review here the place of adequate food supplies as a foundation stone in building a stable structure of economic and political rehabilitation. We must send every pound of food that is practical to ship to these countries of greatest need. There can be no disagreement on this basic purpose.

Our plans to carry out this purpose have been complicated by crop developments in North America during recent weeks. Deterioration in United States corn crop prospects has reduced the estimated supply of corn for the year ahead to a total about 700 million bushels below last year. The total supply of the four principal feed grains will be down about a billion bushels. This makes it appear certain that continuation of heavy demand and high prices for livestock products would provide the incentive for farmers to feed much more wheat, cutting heavily into the record 1947 crop. A further complication is the fact that Canada's wheat prospects have recently been estimated at about 15 per cent below last year.

These facts call for careful appraisal. The need to ship large supplies abroad is unquestionably great. Also important is the need to protect our own economy and price structure. In this situation, it is imperative that a balance be struck which will call for shipment of the last food calorie which can be provided without undermining the Nation's strength and effectiveness.

It is obvious that such a balance cannot be an inflexible determination. It will be affected by changing condition. The measure of the United States contribution in the world-wide effort to keep rations from dropping below the danger point will also be relative. In appraising export possibilities for 1947-48, it will be helpful to compare them with our shipments last year.

Reports Findings To President

chairman of the board of The Washington Post, leaves the White House yesterday after reporting to President Truman the results of his five-week tour of Europe. Meyer, who served last year on the Famine Emergency Committee, was named by the President to a special citizens' emergency food committee. "The need this year is greater than last," Meyer said, and he predicted the "response of the American people to the campaign to save food will be greater, too"

FROM JULY 1, 1946, through June 30, 1947, the United States exported nearly 18½ million long tons of foodstuffs—the largest total ever shipped from one country in a single year. These shipments represented about 49.6 trillion calories of food—enough to supplement the diets of 300 million people to the extent of around 450 calories a day throughout the year. The following table gives a rough breakdown of the calorie value of 1946-47 exports, by major commodity groups:

1946-47 Food Exports

	Trillion of calories	% of T'l.
Wheat and flour	31.2	62.9
Coarse grains	12.1	24.4
Rice	1.3	2.6
Beans and peas	.6	1.2
Edible fats, oils and peanuts	2.0	4.1
Dairy products	1.4	2.6
Dried fruits	.3	.6
Citrus juices	†	†
Vegetables (including potatoes)	.3	.6
Meat and poultry products and fish	.5	1.0
Totals	49.6	100.0

†Negligible.

Last year's exports included 14½ million long tons of grain (more than 550 million bushels). Wheat, and flour in wheat equivalent, made up nearly 400 million bushels of this total, with corn, oats, barley, rye, and grain sorghums accounting for the rest. In terms of food calories, grains represented nearly 88 per cent of all export shipments.

This year there will not be available, under conditions now prevailing, as large a volume of grain for shipment. It now seems likely that about 400 million bushels of wheat and flour will be available for export—about the same as last year. However, the total of other grains and grain products estimated to be available for shipment this year are not much more than one-third the quantity exported during 1946-47—about 70 million bushels as compared with 175 million bushels. Corn exports will have to be limited almost entirely to the 19 million bushels bought last spring and moved out during July and August. Barley, grain sorghums, oats, and rye will make up the rest of the expected 70 million bushels of these "coarse grains."

In arriving at these estimates, the probable price effects of exports at various levels were given careful consideration. The undesirable results of a price spiral, with impacts both at home and abroad, are apparent.

PRESENT indicated domestic use of grain would leave about 470 million bushels (12.3 million long tons) of all grain for export—more than two million long tons short of last year's record shipments. (See following table showing availability of grain, 1946-47 and 1947-48, and possible utilization of 1947-48 United States grain supplies.)

It is obvious that the United States will have to put more emphasis on shipments of foodstuffs other than grain. A careful survey of possibilities, which are regarded as practicable under present circumstances from the price and other points of view, shows that even then we shall probably fall short of last year's total shipments unless arrangements can be made for shipment of supplies which are produced in other countries. The movement of substantial quantities of Cuban sugar to food-deficit countries is an important illustration of this possibility.

The next table gives a rough estimate of United States export availabilities of all foods for 1947-48 year. It is broken down in terms of calorie value, percentage of major commodity groups, and cost on a calorie basis. The cost item, of course, is a vital one. Some commodities which conceivably might be exported, but for which the calorie cost would obviously be so great as to remove them from practical consideration, have not been listed.

The table shows that the calorie value of grains in the export program for this year would be only about 82 per cent of the total, as compared with 88 per cent last year. From the cost point of view, the following listed commodities would cost, at present prices, from two to five dollars per 100,000 calories: wheat, flour, coarse grains, dry peas, lard, and edible oils. (Cuban sugar also falls in this price range.) Fods costing between five and 10 dollars per 100,000 calories would include: milled rice, dry beans, dried prunes, raisins, peanuts, and nonfat dry milk solids. Most other dairy products would range from 15 to 20 dollars per 100,000 calories. Practically all other animal products and processed fruits and vegetables would run considerably higher than 30 dollars.

Estimated export availabilities, 1947-48

	Trillion calories	Pct. of probable total cost	Pct. of total	Average cost per 1,000,000 calories
	Million	Dollars		Dollars
Wheat, flour	32.9	71.9	1066.0	49.0	3.24
Coarse grains	4.6	10.1	146.1	6.7	3.15
Rice	1.3	2.8	85.8	3.9	6.77
Beans & peas	.7	1.5	32.2	1.5	4.81
Edible fats, oils, peanuts	3.0	6.6	153.9	7.1	5.06
Dairy products	1.7	3.7	253.5	11.7	14.81
Dried fruits	.6	1.3	46.3	2.1	8.15
Citrus juices	.1	.2	18.5	.8	24.74
Vegetables (including potatoes)	.2	.4	46.3	2.1	22.54
Meat and poultry, products and fish	.7	1.5	328.0	15.1	46.02
Total	45.8	100.0	2176.6	100.0	4.75

THE United States will not, of course, be working alone in the job of getting food to deficit areas. The world food problem requires the full cooperation of all nations. It is believed that food exports in 1947-48 from countries other than the United States could be available under present circumstances for shipment by the United States, there would still be a serious gap between the minimum needs of deficit countries and the total of foodstuffs which could be supplied.

In view of this serious situation, additional steps should be taken to increase the availability of food supplies for export and the efficiency of their use. A definite responsibility rests on the deficit countries to make the most effective possible use of their indigenous production by strengthening their collection and distribution systems, and by spreading carefully all available supplies and by spreading carefully all available supplies the marketing year. As mentioned in this report, increased emphasis must be placed on foods other than grains for shipment from the United States, and supplies from all exporting countries must be channeled to the areas of most critical need.

Immediate consideration must be given to the conservation of our grain supplies, through a voluntary campaign to economize domestic use—particularly of those livestock products whose production require large amounts of grain. Recommendations for any legislative action which might be necessary to maximize the availability of United States grain for export should also be considered.

The next table shows the quantities of grains (including coarse grains) and rice. Sugar shipments can be increased by about 1.8 million tons, according to present estimates, and increases in shipments of edible fats and oils would account for most of the remainder. (See following table.)

Argentina and Australia could provide most of the increase in grains (Argentina 1.3 million tons, Australia 0.6 million tons), and Burma most of the increase in rice exports (775,000 tons out of an estimated total increase of one million tons). Cuba can be expected to supply most of the increase in available sugar, and the Philippine Republic almost the entire increase in edible fats and oils.

6 New Members Named By Advertising Bureau

New York, Sept. 25 (U.P.).—The appointment of six new members to the American Newspaper Publishers Association Bureau of Advertising was announced today by Richard W. Slocum, chairman of the bureau's governing board.

Soviet Paper Hits U. S. Policy

Moscow, Sept. 25 (U.P.).—Russian political writers loosed against the United States and its leaders today a blast of denunciation unparalleled since the days when Hitler and his Nazis were their targets.

President Truman, Secretary of State George C. Marshall, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Congressmen, newspapers, "Wall Street" and the American Legion were among the men and institutions singled out for criticism.

The two main articles were published in the biweekly Literary Gazette, the organ of the Union of Soviet writers and thus not, formally at least, an official spokesorgan for the government.

Ten of the 24 pages of the publication were devoted to five articles attacking the United States. Attacks on Britain and France occupied 2½ columns.

There were other articles, not so harsh, in the two main newspapers. One of these, Izvestia, the government organ, published a cartoon depicting a fat Uncle Sam, labelled Wall Street, reaching a clawed hand round the world toward the United States. Urging Uncle Sam in is "war incendiary," clutching an atom bomb in his hand.

David aslavsky, political commentator for the Communist Party organ Pravda, led off the attacks in the Literary Gazette. He said that Mr. Truman and General Marshall led the "source of international reaction and criminal aggression."

He continued to say that General Marshall's proposals in the U. N. were "directed toward the destruction of the U. N. and preparation of a new criminal law."

'Mrs. Miniver' Gets a Divorce

Associated Press WIREPHOTOS

All or None, Russia's Offer

warned "the result would be the same."

He insisted calmly but emphatically:

"It is impossible for the Security Council to make any positive decision on applications without decision to admit all five countries."

In other words, a majority vote for Italy could always be invalidated by a Soviet veto if the majority voted against the Balkan satellites. There is no difference of opinion about Finland and every prospect that her admission will get a unanimous vote.

Only Oscar Lange of Poland, who proposed the simultaneous admission of the five applicants, supported the Soviet's demand. It quickly became obvious that there was considerable antagonism to Bulgaria's application. The attitude toward Hungary was only a degree less cold among the majority, but there was unanimity about Italy's right to membership.

Before the Council adjourned without decision, it began consideration of Hungary's membership. This brought a blistering attack from Johnson against violations of human rights in Hungary—an attack which drew the retort from Gromyko that Russia has different ideas on what human rights are.

Americans, said Johnson, doubt the ability and willingness of the Hungarian government to abide by the obligations of membership.

Although the first national elections in 1947 were "free and unfettered," he declared:

"The effect to maintain and develop democratic processes and to safeguard the rights and liberties of the Hungarian people has been systematically undermined by a minority party, which has utilized the police in the service of party power as an instrument of coercion rather than in defense of the rights and freedom of all people."

Numerous political crises provoked there have resulted in a "Government subservient in all essential matters to other interests," he said.

"These persistent violations of human rights, which show no sign of abatement, are in clear violation of the treaty of peace. . . ."

The Soviet government, replied Gromyko, "is unable to agree with the United States representative's criterion as to whether or not there is a violation of human rights."

The American delegation in its continuous high praise of Italy appeared conscious that its statements were being transmitted to that country, and would give moral support to that government in its struggle against the Communists. They were aware also that after Gromyko's last veto of Italian membership there were numerous anti-Communist riots.

THE TRUTH ABOUT DRINKING

Is it true: that the more accustomed you are to alcohol the less it affects you . . . that big men can stand more than small . . . that liquor stimulates? October Reader's Digest—now on sale—brings you surprising scientific facts about drinking. 26-page condensation from Ernie Pyle's last book. Home Country is a collection of Pyle's finest early columns, written before he became our most beloved war correspondent. Grief's slow wisdom. Should sorrow be expressed or concealed? In this condensation from his best-seller Peace of Mind, Dr. Joshua Liebman shows how unwise attitudes toward grief can cause mental and physical ills . . . and outlines a sound approach to bereavement.

Bet you can't talk, either. When you talk, do you groan, wiggle your stomach, keep full of air? No? Then you aren't talking. Robert Potter tells how (in his 40's) he's learning to talk . . . how some screwy-sounding practice may give you a richer voice.

Parole of Four In Capone Mob Is Held Valid

Chicago, Sept. 25 (AP).—Daniel M. Lyons, chairman of the United States Parole Board, told a House subcommittee investigation today he was "neither empowered to nor inclined to revoke" paroles granted four former Capone gangsters after serving portions of their prison terms.

"These men were released by proper process, and I have no authority to revoke the release," said the chairman who took office September 16, a month after the four Chicago men were paroled.

Paul "The Waiter" Ricca, Philip D'Andrea, Charles "Cherry Nose" Gioe and Louis "Little New York" Campagna were released on August 14 after serving 3 years and 4 months of a 10-year sentence for extorting one million dollars from the motion picture industry.

Top Jobs Filled In Air Force

nounced the appointment of Brackley Shaw, 34-year-old New York attorney, to be general counsel of the Department of Air Force. Shaw, 34, served as an Army officer during the war and has been legal adviser to Symington during the latter's term as Assistant Secretary of War for Air.

Secretaryship Open

Yesterday's appointments almost complete the pob of staffing the Nation's new national military establishment. Still open is an Assistant Secretaryship in both the Army and Navy Departments.

Barrows, 63, is a Yale graduate. He was with Sears Roebuck from 1926 until he retired early this year. Since last winter he has been serving as a military government official in Germany. In his new post, he will direct procurement for the Air Force.

"Sonny" Whitney, 48, has been active in aviation for many years. He was a pilot in World War I, and a top official of Pan American Airways for many years. During World War II he served with the Ninth Air Force. In 1932 Whitney was a Democratic nominee for the House, but was defeated in the election.

Former Harvard Teacher

The other new Assistant Air Secretary was an attorney with the Security and Exchange Commission here from 1937 to 1940. Zuckert taught at Harvard from 1940 to 1944, when he entered the Navy. He is 36.

Spaatz's appointment had been expected. He will continue as a four-star general, though now coequal with General of the Army Eisenhower and Fleet Admiral Nimitz. When the latter retire, their successors will have only four-star rank.

Second Man Dies In Tanker Blast

Norfolk, Va., Sept. 25 (AP).—The Coast Guard reported today that a second crewman died last night of burns suffered in an explosion aboard the British tanker Esso Saranac 230 miles off Cape Henry.

Three men were burned when the front furnace of the port boiler blew up Tuesday night. One died shortly afterward. Names of the two dead men were withheld pending notification of next of kin.

The Coast Guard cutter Cherokee, dispatched from Norfolk in response to a radio call from the disabled tanker, reached the vessel at 8:20 a. m. today and removed the third burned crewman, who will be brought to Norfolk for hospitalization. He is Edwin Charles Livitt of Hull, Yorkshire, England.

British Study U. S. Trade Plan

London, Sept. 25 (AP).—American negotiators have suggested a reduction in United States tariffs over a period of 20 to 25 years in exchange for an equitable reduction in the British imperial preference system, official British government sources said tonight.

The American proposal—advanced to overcome a deadlock in United States—British Commonwealth negotiations over imperial preference—was considered today by the British cabinet, the informants said. They added that the cabinet would neither accept nor reject the United States plan.

The informants said the American plan suggested that Britain and the Dominions need make no cuts in imperial preference over the next five years, but that reductions take place on a progressively stepped up basis over the remainder of the period.

U. S. Wins Overwhelming Support in First Test on Greek Issue was 38 votes to 6 for asking the Bulgarians and Albanians whether they would accept such conditions. Only the Arab states, working as a disciplined unit, abstained from voting—apparently as a warning to the United States not to offend them in the coming debates over Palestine.

The United States introduced a stiff resolution into the political committee debate—stiffer by far than anything the United States had previously proposed in its futile efforts to get the Security Council to act on the problem.

Based on Findings

The resolution, submitted by Herschel V. Johnson, was based on the findings of the commission sent to Greece by the Security Council last winter and of the subsidiary group which has been investigating border incidents in recent months.

It found Albania, Bulgaria and Yugoslavia guilty of helping the guerillas, in violation of the charter. It called upon them "to cease and desist from rendering any further assistance or support in any form" to the guerillas.

It demanded that the three northern neighbors and Greece establish "normal diplomatic and good neighborly relations" quickly; that they conclude frontier agreements to control their frontiers and settle disputes peacefully; that they voluntarily repatriate refugees wherever possible and keep these refugees from political or military activity; and that they consider making agreements for the voluntary transfer of minorities.

The resolution went on to set up a special Assembly committee, with headquarters in Salonika, to make sure that the four Balkan governments comply with these recommendations, and to help the four governments to carry them out. The committee would expect the cooperation of the four governments in carrying out its work "in such places and in the territories of the four states concerned as it may deem appropriate." (In the case of the Security Council's commission, Yugoslavia, Bulgaria and Albania refused their cooperation.)

Special Session Provision

Finally, the resolution would authorize the special committee to recommend a special session of the Assembly "as a matter of urgency" if necessary between the end of this Assembly and the beginning of the next. Such a special session, presumably, would be unnecessary if the Assembly approves Secretary Marshall's proposal of a standing committee of 55 nations to remain in session all year.

Nothing in all this was a surprise; its strong provisions had been foreshadowed in Marshall's opening speech to the Assembly on September 17. But the American delegation sprang a surprise at the very outset of today's meeting by asking advance assurances from Bulgaria and Albania. Yugoslavia, of course, is already a member of the United Nations.

In the Security Council it has been customary, and provided in the charter, for non-member states to be invited to take part in debates, without a vote, on issues in which they are involved. This was done with Bulgaria and Albania on the Greek issue in the Council, and with Albania on the Corfu Channel dispute with Great Britain. In the Assembly the Arab High Command and the Jewish Agency were invited last Spring during the special session on Palestine.

But there has never been a case in the Assembly of any nonmember being directly accused of wrongdoing, as Bulgaria and Alabania have been in the present dispute. The Bulgarians and Albanians therefore wrote to President Oswaldo Aranha of the Assembly a few days ago, asking that they be invited to participate in the coming debates.

When the meeting opened today, Committee Chairman Joseph Bech of Luxembourg read a letter of transmittal from Aranha and asked what should be done about it.

Herschel Johnson promptly replied that the United States had no objection whatever to inviting the Bulgars and Albanians, "if they accept in advance, for the purposes of the dispute, the obligations of specific settlement provided in the Charter."

He did not say so, but he was quoting directly from Article 35, paragraph 2, of the Charter, in the chapter dealing with the pacific settlement of disputes. This provides that any state which does not belong to the United Nations may call the attention of the Security Council or the Assembly to any dispute involving itself if it accepts such advance pledges.

The obligations of peaceful settlements, as set forth in Article 33, call upon parties to a dispute first of all to "seek a solution by negotiation, inquiry, mediation, conciliation, arbitration, judicial settlement, resort to regional agencies or arrangements or other peaceful means of their own choice."

Since the parallel was not exact, in that the Bulgars and Albanians were not calling the Assembly's attention to the Greek dispute, Johnson's suggestion touched off a spirited debate of more than an hour.

The Russians and their friends seemed agitated and taken by surprise. Andrei Gromkyo said the United States was "artificially dragging a condition into this question;" Dmitri Manuilsky of the Ukrain argued that the Assembly was not a court and that appelants before it should not have to accept advance conditions.

Foreign Minister Zygmunt Modzelewski of Poland went so far as to argue that acceptance of such advance pledges by Bulgaria and Albania would "disable them as free states."

Premier Paul Henri Spaak of Belgium, probably the most experienced of all the delegates in interpreting the charter, said Johnson's proposal was sound and legal. Foreign Minister Osten Unden of Sweden found abundant legal basis for it in other articles of the charter. Hector McNeil of Britain said advance pledges were "essential"; Yvon Delbos of France and other non-Soviet spokesmen ranged themselves on America's side.

The only variation came from Foreign Minister Herbert V. Evatt of Australia, who said the first thing to do was to ask the Bulgarians and Albanians whether they would abide by such conditions. If they did not, he suggested, the committee might still give them a hearing, although it could not let them participate in the debate.

Hanns Eisler's Visa Called Consular Slip

to call Meyer as a witness.

Stripling said, "that will be up to the committee."

Little chance that Meyer would be called was seen, however, when it became known that the committee plans to close its hearings early today.

Meyer, according to Littell, failed to see a "stop order," which had gone out to all consular officers to consult the State Department if Eisler applied for a permanent visa.

The same mistake was not made, however, by the Immigration Service across the border at Calexico, Calif.

Stopped at Calexico

Eisler was stopped there and a Board of Special Inquiry of the United States Immigration Service reexamined the case.

This board made no finding against Eisler on political grounds, but ruled that he was not qualified as a professor for special status that would let him into the country without regard to quota.

Eisler, as committee evidence shows, immediately appealed to the Board of Immigration Appeals in Washington. By executive order the Immigration Department was transferred from the Labor Department to the Justice Department on June 14, 1940.

On October 16, 1940, the Appeals Board here reversed the decision of the Calexico Special Inquiry Board and held that Eisler was admissible.

Thus the Hollywood composer, brother of Gerhart Eisler, identified by the FBI as onetime Communist boss in the United States, became a permanent resident and applied for his first citizenship papers.

Mystery Deepens

The mystery deepened as it was recalled that it was the Labor Department itself which originally built up the file against Eisler on the grounds of his political activity, which led a State Department career officer to state, "The evidence establishes preponderantly that Eisler is a Communist, although it does not show that he is an enrolled member of the Communist Party."

Messersmith acknowledged that he had written the consul general at Havana, Cuba, in 1939, urging prompt and personal consideration of the Eisler case 13 days after Mrs. Roosevelt had interceded for him.

Messersmith also testified he had sent the consul general a copy of a letter that Welles had written in answer to Mrs. Roosevelt's inquiries. But the best the Havana consul did for Eisler was a temporary permit, which required Eisler to leave the country again. That was the time he went to Mexico.

Stripling said the committee would go into the actions of the Board of Immigration today.

Judge to Rule On Md. County Taxes Thursday

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 25 (AP).—Judge James Clark said today he would hand down next Thursday a decision on a suit to force the Anne Arundel County Commissioners to re-examine 47 allegedly unjust assessments.

Clark heard arguments for a writ of mandamus brought by Justin C. Buch, a county taxpayer.

Buch had demanded a hearing of county commissioners on his contention that the properties were "undervalued." But the officials replied they would grant no hearing and that his proper recourse was the State Tax Commission.

Benjamin Michaelson, counselor for the county commissioners, told Judge Clark that if he granted the writ, it would create chaos. He said the writ was not the proper remedy, since Buch could appeal to the commission.

Randolph to Speak At Vienna Dinner

Jennings Randolph, Capital Airlines official and former West Virginia Representative, will discuss "Aviation and World Peace" at a banquet of the Vienna, Va., Businessmen's Association at 7:30 tonight in the Vienna Elementary School.

Association President William H. Hunt also announced that Jack Hill, civic leader, will report on the progress of the town's proposed sewer and water project. More than 200 property owners are said to have indicated their desire to participate in the project.

Train Schedule Change Argument Heard

Baltimore, Sept. 25 (AP).—The Maryland Public Service Commission heard arguments on the Western Maryland Railroad's proposal to reschedule its 4:35 Baltimore-Hagerstown train and then took the matter under advisement today.

Moving up the departure time to 3:35 (EST) was opposed by a number of Westminster, Md., residents who were joined by PSC People's Counsel Phillip H. Dorsey, jr.

Break in N. C. Dam Cuts City's Water

Greensboro, N. C., Sept. 25 (AP). Greensboro city authorities today called upon industries here to cease immediately the use of water pending repair of a big break in the municipal dam caused by a 7.54-inch rainfall yesterday.

Rain washed out 150 feet of the earth dam forming Lake Brandt, source of the city water supply.

Eccles Sees Inflation Threatening Economic Collapse

By The Associated Press

Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, said yesterday the Nation faces danger of "economic collapse" if inflation continues unchecked and he suggested that:

Eccles

1. It might be better to reduce expenditures on the Nation's military forces in order to aid foreign democracies—to place spending to "maintain peace" above spending to "prepare for the next war."

2. Wartime rationing and other controls should be reimposed "if needed" to feed the "starving democracies of Europe" although voluntary rationing is the "desirable way" if it will work.

3. Brakes should be applied to bank expansion of private credit, and the Federal Reserve Board should be given more power to do the job.

Domestic Readjustment Overdue

Eccles spoke before the National Association of Supervisors of State Banks. He said that "with severe distortions in wages, prices, and profits" now exerting inflationary pressures, "readjustment in our domestic situation is overdue. The sooner it can be brought about, the better it will be for the Nation and the world," he said. "The longer . . . postponed, the longer it will take to reach a stable condition of employment and production."

Calling for "positive action" to stop inflationary developments, he said that the United States' expenditure of 25 billion dollars on military forces in the first postwar fiscal years compared with $16,500,000,000 spent on foreign aid in that period.

"It may be we could spend less on military forces if we spent more to maintain conditions on which democracy and peace depend," he said.

"Unattractive Alternatives"

"We can't very well continue to spend as much as we have on both," he asserted, adding that a choice must be made between "unattractive alternatives" which point up to these questions:

1. How much are we going to make available to maintain peace through provision of food and productive facilities to get democracies back on their feet?" and

2. "How much are we going to spend preparing for the next war?"

Eccles said a mistake was made in abruptly discontinuing lend-lease and that price controls, rationing, materials allocations and excess profits taxes were ended too soon.

"The country is now suffering the consequences of having placed our reliance upon the restoration of a competitive price situation to bring about necessary postwar readjustments in an abnormal period when effective demand far exceeds available supplies," he said.

"As a result, the economy is caught fast ni a serious wage-cost-price spiral. Short farm crops at home and abroad have intensified this spiral.

"An international crisis, in part the result of our rising prices, is imposing on us obligations that can only be discharged by actions that will increase our inflationary difficulties.

"Yet we should not allow what is left of European democracy to perish through starvation and communism."

Indicating the factors which should be restrained, Eccles said:

"The higher the spiral of inflation is wound by further general price and wage increases, by further rapid expansion of private debt, and by failure to reduce public expenditure for all purposes that can be eliminated or postponed until the emergency has ended, the more serious the inevitable readjustment is certain to be."

Eccles said that "our banks now appear to be in a position to withstand the severe economic storm that is threatening," he he warned that "this is not the time for them to remove their storm shutters or venture out into the gale."

Man Held for Jury In Death of Wife

Ferndale, Md., Sept. 25 (AP).—Just two weeks after he reported his wife fell into a well he was cleaning and was fatally injured, Joseph H. Holland was held for grand jury action today after pleading innocent to a charge he killed her.

The 43-year-old farmer was arraigned yesterday on a charge he "wilfully and deliberately" killed his wife "by striking on the head with a blunt instrument." Magistrate David B. Dunker ordered him held without bond.

No weapon was introduced at the hearing.

4000 Refugees Slain on Train, Pakistan Says

Karachi, Pakistan, Sept. 25 (U.P.).—The Pakistan government said today that 4000 persons out of 4500 aboard a single refugee train are dead, missing or wounded as the result of an attack by Hindus and Sikhs.

In addition to the refugees, the British officers of the Royal Indian Army were killed in trying to defend the refugees, the statement said.

Thirteen Hindu officers in the escort surrendered to the attackers, it was asserted.

Democrats Have Already Lost The Peace, Declares Taft

tor Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.), with whom he has differed on Bretton Woods, the British loan and some other post-war measures.

To Vandenberg he attributed the change in our foreign policy course toward Russia, much of the success of the Rio conference, and improvement of the U. N. Charter. He came out for Vandenberg's proposal to "remain in Germany indefinitely, but only to prevent rearmament."

Here are the seven "general principles" he proposed as a guide to GOP policy:

1. Maintenance of peace "so long as conditions do not threaten the freedom of the people of the United States."

2. Changing the whole emphasis in the United Nations to "establishment of law and equal justice under law." He said that means retention of the veto until a law is written "agreed to by all."

3. Oppose Communism. The battle must be fought out in each country by the people of that country. We can help with limited loans and other assistance in countries having severe economic hardship.

Would Speed German Recovery

4. Speed up German economic recovery. After a ban on German rearmament and details of reparations are worked out, Germany should be allowed to develop its own economy regardless of com-

5. Make peace with Japan as petition with other nations. rapidly as possible, ban rearmament, but permit Japan to support itself. Return to the principles of the Atlantic Charter, which he charged our foreign policy flouted. Direct our policies as far as practicable "toward raising the standard of living of every nation, including the conquered countries."

6. Help stricken countries to get on their feet, but steer clear of an "international WPA." We should give them machinery and raw materials needed to set the wheels going, and provide some food relief, meanwhile. But loans should be limited to specific countries for specific purposes, and only to pay for goods shipped from this country.

Strong Army and Navy

Maintain a strong Army and Navy "and while the Russian attitude remains what it is, we had better retain the atomic bomb. We want the most expert army the world has ever seen."

In conclusion, Taft warned against developing "an era of American imperialism." He said the United States should stand up for our own system of individual and economic freedom, point out dangers of totalitarianism, but should not be a "busybody."

Work Called Outstanding

Commission Chairman David E. Lilienthal said the Monsanto Chemical Co., had performed an outstanding service to the people of the United States" in its operation of the Clinton project since 1945. The University of Chicago will operate the new alignment on a four-year contract.

25 Pct. of U. N. Time Is Spent On Procedure

Lake Success, N. Y., Sept. 25 (U.P.).—The United Nations wastes more than one fourth of its time arguing over matters of procedure, it was revealed today.

Andrew Cordier, executive assistant to the Secretary General, said the U. N. spent two weeks of its last 7½-week-long session wrangling over procedure. These two weeks cost the member nations over $500,000, he estimated.

Cordier spoke at a press conference held by Escott Reid, chairman of the committee on procedures and organization, whose proposed rules to prevent the U. N. from wasting its time are expected to be adopted by the Assembly next Tuesday.

Woman Denies Slaying Guilt

Alexandria police yesterday charged a 38-year-old woman with the September 20 slaying of Nelson Washington, 51, 607 S. St. Asaph st., Alexandria.

Henrietta Phillips, same address, pleaded innocent to the murder charge in police court. Judge James R. Duncan continued the case to today, while he considered a plea for dismissal entered by the defense.

Police said they found Washington's body at the foot of the stairs in his home after a drinking party. A stab wound in the chest was discovered at the autopsy, they said. Miss Phillips confessed stabbing Washington, police reported. She claimed she had acted in self-defense during a fight, they said.

Uniform Legislation On Liquor to Be Studied

Atlantic City, N. J., Sept. 25 (AP). The National Alcoholic Beverage Control Association authorized its president today to make a study of liquor legislation with a view toward establishment of uniform control by all States.

The association approved a resolution at the closing session of its tenth annual meeting which called for formation of a committee consisting of representatives of its own group, the National Council of State Liquor Administrators, the Council of State Governments, the American Bar Association and the licensed beverage industries.

Slavs Nearly Started War, Jenkins Says

By The Associated Press

Representative Jenkins (R., Ohio) says that "lack of courage" by a Yugoslav army unit "is the chief reason that we are not now engaged in a third world war."

Jenkins

He made the statement in a letter from Trieste, made public by his office here.

Jenkins wrote that on September 15 the Yugoslavs "decided to force themselves" into territory controlled by American and British occupation forces.

He continued that a Yugoslav officer served notice on the British army that his forces would move through British and American lines "by force if necessary."

Ultimatum Rejected

"It was evident," Jenkins wrote, "that this officer was acting purely as a messenger boy for the authorities in Belgrade and Moscow. He was told by the American and British officers that his forces would not be permitted to pass, and that he should return to his forces and advise the authorities that their conduct might precipitate World War III, and that they should be careful of their actions. The American and British officers contacted their respective governments, who advised them to stand firm and who made protest immediately to Belgrade and Moscow.

"At midnight the Yugoslav army came forward with a large number of men and with horse-drawn artillery, indicating their purpose to go through. The American and British forces stood firm and resolved that the Yugoslavs would be compelled to start the conflict. The Yugoslavs turned and went back down the hill. The lack of courage on the part of these Yugoslavs is the chief reason that we are not now engaged in a third world war."

Truman Moved by Incident

[Incidents, similar to this, were indicated as the reason President Truman ordered Secretary of Defense James V. Forrestal sworn in on his new job. The date of order was September 16, and Forrestal's oath was taken September 17.—Editor's note.]

Jenkins, chairman of a House subcommittee studying foreign aid problems, added that on September 17 "a vicious strike broke out in one of the large shipyards. This was brought about," he wrote, "by a group of well-known Communists who no doubt were operating under instructions from Moscow. . . .

"No doubt there was a connection between the action of the Yugoslav army and that of the Communists who forced the strike."

"There is no doubt in my mind but that the American Army will handle the situation as it always does."

Hearing Set On Bookmaking

Baltimore, Sept. 25 (AP).—The legislative council will hold an open hearing next Wednesday night on the question of legalized bookmaking, Joseph R. Byrnes, council chairman and president of the State Senate, said today.

Byrnes, in a letter to Baltimore City Councilman H. Warren Buckler, jr., who had asked the hearing be held, explained:

"At that meeting the council will be glad to hear both the opponents and proponents of the plan. If sufficient favorable sentiment is demonstrated, I am sure the council will then give it serious consideration."

$200,000 Asked for River Terrace School

Residents of the River Terrace area in northeast Washington have long campaigned for an elementary school for their community.

The District Board of Education, in its 1949 budget, has asked for $200,000 to start on an eight-room school for the area, and for an additional $14,000 to equip it.

Other details of what the budget estimates propose for individual schools follow:

Roosevelt Senior High—$21,560 asked for equipment in the clothing, foods, and child care laboratories, and for the model apartment, and $9340 for other home economics equipment.

Season School—$250,000 asked to begin a new 16-room Seaton School replacement building near 3d and I sts. nw. at a total cost of $631,000. The present school was built in 1871.

Shaw Junior High—Half a million dollars was asked to start a new $1,808,000 Shaw Junior High replacement building at 7th and O sts. nw. The present building, put up in 1902 and used as a white technical school until 1929, has inadequate recreation and physical education facilities, and, according to the board, "is not satisfactory" for junior high school purposes. The board also asked $100,000 to buy additional land for the new building.

Slowe School—$45,000 asked to complete the second floor of the new Slowe School near 15th and Hamlin sts. ne. The first four classrooms and a kindergarten are slated to be ready this fall. The new building is to replace a temporary Slowe school. Also requested was $8000 for equipping the building.

Smothers School—See Nalle.

Spingarn Senior High—Another $700,117 was asked for continuing construction of Spingarn Senior at 24th st. and Benning rd. ne. This project, for which $1,226,594 has been appropriated, is to be advertised for bids in December. The school has been planned since 1941, and is now expected to cost $2,505,000. It would reduce the load on the city's present three Negro high schools.

Stanton School—$250,000 sought to start construction of a 16-room Stanton school replacement building near Good Hope and Naylor rds. se. The project would cost $631,000. Of Stanton's two present buildings, one is a four-room structure built in 1903, the other is a wartime temporary. There were 482 children in them last year, but a survey showed 891 pre-school-age children in the newly developed area.

Stevens School—A $550,000 fund was asked to buy a site at 21st and L sts. nw. for a new 24-room replacement for the present Stevens School. The main present building went up in 1868. The board's request added: "The building is nonfireproof in construction except for the stairways. There are only two exits from the main classroom floor through which children from 18 classrooms in the building must pass to safety in case of emergency. The present structure is a definite hazard.

"Despite the fact that the existing school is a structure of three stories and a basement, all of its toilet facilities for children are located in the basement.

Lacks Facilities

"The present school does not afford the facilities which the program of a modern elementary school requires. Among other things it lacks an auditorium, a library, a lunchroom, an office for the principal, a first aid room, physical education and recreation facilities."

The proposed building would eliminate part-time classes at Briggs Montgomery School, and also permit needed occupational classes for Stevens' boys and girls.

Stuart Junior High—A $5500 fund was asked to build a covered and heated passageway between the main building and the boys' gymnasium.

Syphax School — A $150,000 starting fund was asked for an eight-room addition at Syphax to cost $305,000. Last year more than 150 pupils were on part-time in the Syphax and Bell schools. There were also a total of 32 classes in those two schools plus the Ambush and Smallwood schools averaging more than 40 pupils each. All four schools are in Southwest Washington. The new addition would eliminate part-time in the section and also cut the average class size.

$297,030 More Asked

Taft Junior High—$297,030 requested to complete the Taft Junior High addition for which $516,970 has been appropriated. Because of present crowding, youngsters who live near Taft have been shunted to other schools several miles away. The school is at 18th and Perry sts. ne. The addition would include 10 classrooms, two gymnasiums, and other facilities. The project is to be advertised for bids next month.

Terrell Junior High—$150,000 asked to buy additional land near 1st and Pierce sts. nw. for a replacement building for Terrell, and $500,000 to start construction. For the site $225,000 already has been appropriated. The city also has $28,350 this year for plans. The present Terrell building, put up in 1890, has room for 673. Last year's enrollment was about 900, 180 of them used the old Blake Elementary School. Facilities are generally inadequate for a junior high. Also requested was $34,400 to replace the heating plant in the Blake and Van Ness schools.

Truesdall School—Money to hire a school clerk next fall was included.

Turner Junior High—A $500,000 fund was asked to start building a new junior high school near Pomeroy and Stanton rds. se., the first Negro junior high school building in the Anacostia section, at an eventual cost of $2,025,000. Last year 350 junior high students attended classes in the Turner elementary building, and 150 others went to mid-town junior highs. The proposed new building would serve children moving up from the Birney, Turner and Garfield schools. The board also asked $25,000 to buy additional land for physical education and play at Turner Elementary.

To Replace Present Schools

Tyler School—The finishing $209,500 for the new Tyler ele- $209,500 for the new Tyler Elementary School at 11th and G sts. se. was requested. Earlier appropriations total $460,500. The new school, planned since 1941, will replace the present Cranch, Tyler and Wallach schools, built from 1864 to 1890.

Van Ness—A $34,400 request called for replacing the hot-air heating plants at the Van Ness School and the Terrell Junior High annex (Blake) School.

Walker-Jones school—A $360,500 fund was asked to complete the proposed 24-room replacement building for the present Walker and Jones schools. The project is to be located near 3d and L sts. nw., and is to be advertised for bids early next year. Earlier appropriations total $310,500. The new building would eliminate 17 part-time classes in the Walker, Jones and Douglass-Simmons schools. Also included in the budget estimates was $56,000 to equip the new building, plus money for extra employes late last year.

Washington Vocational-High—A $3400 item was requested to hire a teacher of practical nursing.

Western High—A $98,365 equipment fund was asked to complete modernizing the building.

Wheatley—A $35,000 fund was asked to replace two 44-year-old boilers which have been condemned by the city's official boiler inspector.

Woodrow Wilson High—A $3500 item was asked to complete the school rifle range, so the cadets will no longer have to travel to the Police Department's outdoor range for target practice.

Young School—The final $155,000 was asked to complete an 8-room Young School addition costing $305,000. The other money has been appropriated and the project is to be advertised for bids next spring. Last fall Young's enrollment was 1053, and 358 children were on part-time. Budget requests also included money to staff the addition in early 1949. The addition would eliminate part-time classes at the school.

Overseas Aid Officials And Truman Confer

By the United Press

President Truman conferred briefly yesterday with directors of American Overseas Aid, Inc., a new organization created to coordinate activities of more than 15 foreign relief organizations.

He told the group that their undertaking was world-wide proof that this country feels kindly toward everyone in distress and wants to see that no one starves.

The delegation was headed by Charles P. Taft, chairman of the State Department's Advisory Committee on Economic Aid, and included Chester C. Davis, head of Mr. Truman's special food study committee, and Martin T. Hill, deputy secretary general of the United Nations.

British to Ask U. N. Policing Of Palestine Against Riots

Lake Success, Sept. 25 (AP).—Britain was expected to demand tomorrow that the United Nations Assembly enforce any decision on the future of Palestine with an international police force to halt anticipated Jewish-Arab conflict over the verdict.

The British position will be laid before the Assembly's 55-nation extraordinary Palestine committee which organized this morning. It picked Australian Foreign Minister Herbert C. Evatt as chairman and invited the Jewish Agency for Palestine and the Arab Higher Committee to take part in its discussions.

Representatives of the Jewish Agency were reported seeking a private conference with Secretary of State Marshall before the Assembly settled down to a full-dress review of the Palestine problem in the light of majority recommendations of a special 11-nation investigating committee for Jewish-Arab partition.

Official spokesmen for the American delegation refused to confirm or deny that such a meeting with Marshall was contemplated. Marshall met Arab representatives earlier in the week in a session which was kept secret until disclosed by the Arabs themselves.

Note Threatens Jewish Heads' Deaths

Jerusalem, Sept. 25 (AP).—A letter signed by "The Commander in Chief of Fighting Arab Youth for Free Palestine" threatened that David Ben-Gurion, president of the Jewish Agency Executive, and four other Jewish leaders would be shot to death within three months, an official source said today.

Ben-Gurion earlier had reported receiving the death threat.

"You will die as soon as possible through our special fighting group," the letter said. "With the help and aid of many other anti-Jewish organizations over the world we shall disturb all international Jewish aims and hopes for making our Arab Palestine into a Jewish country."

"Remember, after the late Sami Taha, you are next," the letter continued.

Sami Taha, a Haifa labor leader who was an outspoken opponent of the exiled Mufti, Haj Amin Al Husseini, was assassinated a few weeks ago. He had advocated moderation in Arab leadership and cooperation with Jews in settling the Palestine question.

Haganah Army Battles Extremists

Jerusalem, Sept. 25 (U.P.).—Members of the moderate Haganah underground army had their first gun fight with extremists of the Irgun Zvai Leumi today near Rehovot, six miles southwest of Tel Aviv. First reports said no one was injured.

The fight started when Irgunists attacked a number of Haganah men possibly attempting to kidnap one. Haganah headed off the Irgunists with guns until they attracted the attention of British troops and police.

Apparently both sides took care not to let the fight develop into a full-fledged battle. Haganah is attempting to gain mastery over the Irgunists by kidnaping their leaders and cutting off their sources of income. Irgun is retaliating by kidnaping Haganah leaders.

Sutton Plea For Parole Under Study

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 25 (AP).—F. Murray Benson, director of parole and probation, weighed tonight an appeal of Albert S. Sutton, Washingtonian convicted of murder, for release after serving 11 years of a life sentence.

Sutton was sentenced as a result of the gun slaying of Allen B. Wilson in Montgomery County 13 years ago. Wilson was a route agent for the Washington Times-Herald and the State declared stumbled into a trap set for a Washington gambler.

On record in behalf Sutton's were former Warden Patrick J. Brady, nine doctors and a nurse for whom Sutton has worked since he entered the penitentiary in 1936.

M. W. Adelson, Baltimore attorney, read excerpts of their letters supporting Sutton's request for commutation "under supervision," after declaring Sutton "had reached the point where he has been rehabilitated."

Opposition came from James H. Pugh, Rockville attorney and the Montgomery County State's attorney who prosecuted Sutton, and from three Washington police officers and a Washington Times-Herald reporter.

Benson asserted at the end of the hearing that his recommendation to Governor Lane would be made "without fear or favor." After protesting a Times-Herald story which charged that gamblers and "powerful Maryland politicians" were working for Sutton's freedom.

"So far I have seen no evidence of political or gambling elements fomenting this application," Benson said.

He added that he was "disturbed" at the suggestion by Washington police that Sutton's release "would not be consonant with good justice."

British Note Calls Petkov Death 'Murder'

London, Sept. 25 (INS).—Britain scathingly denounced the Communist-dominated Bulgarian government tonight for what it termed the "judicial murder" of Nikola Petkov, Agrarian Party opposition leader.

The British note declared that the hanging of Petkov, regarded as a patriot inside and outside his homeland, was "yet another example of the use of judicial murder to get rid of people who do not agree with their government."

British officials saw a parallel of the Bulgarian Communist tactics shaping up in Bucharest, where it was announced that the Communist-dominated Romanian government will try Juliu Maniu, venerable Peasant Party leader, October 10.

Like Petkov, the Romanian leader is accused of plotting to overthrow the government. Like Petkov, the aging Maniu is the last big foe of the Communists in his homeland.

The United States Government, before and after the execution of Petkov, last Tuesday, bitterly condemned the Bulgarian regime led by Communist Premier Georgi Dimitrov.

Petkov was lauded by Britain as a "gallant leader of Bulgarian peasant resistance to fascism and all forms of political oppression."

"In the opinion of His Majesty's government," the note said, Petkov died . . . for the right of men to held and express, according to their personal consciences, their own political convictions."

Truman Hopes to Avoid Special Session

gressional leaders, is said to feel that the immediate requirements of Europe are such that there must be action on Capitol Hill.

President Truman said at a White House news conference yesterday that he had not decided to call a special session. He added, however, that he had an open mind on the matter—that he could be convinced if one really seemed necessary.

He explained that the problem lay in the fact that European countries didn't have the dollars to buy American food and fuel.

"You might conceivably work that out without a special session of Congress?" a reporter asked.

Recalls Borah Statement

Mr. Truman said that was exactly what he was trying to do. And he went on to say that he had called the meeting of congressional leaders to go into the situation.

Recently Speaker Joseph W. Martin said that private reports "from a very good source in Europe" indicated that the Old World was in no immediate danger of starvation.

A reporter called this to President Truman's attention yesterday, and represented Speaker Martin as saying that the situation in Europe was not as serious as the Administration made it out to be.

Mr. Truman replied good-naturedly that he had heard the late Senator William E. Borah (R., Idaho) make a statement like this once.

He was referring to a remark attributed to Borah at a historic White House conference in July, 1939. President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Hull were pessimistic about the European scene. They told the congressional leaders that, judging from information coming through official channels, there was grave danger of war.

Borah is supposed to have said that he had his own "private sources of information," and that these indicated that there would be no war. Hitler stormed into Poland two months later.

Eben Ayers, assistant press secretary at the White House, said late yesterday that three Cabinet officers would join President Truman when he meets with congressional leaders Monday.

Besides Secretary Marshall they are Secretary of Commerce W. Averell Harriman and Secretary of Agriculture Clinton P. Anderson. Also sitting in will be Undersecretary of State Robert A. Lovett and John R. Steelman, assistant to the President.

Legislators to Attend

Congresional leaders expected are as follows:

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.), president pro tem of the Senate who also will represent Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio), who was described by the White House as "busy speaking in the West;" Styles Bridges (R., N. H.), chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee; Wallace H. White, jr. (R., Me.), Senate Republican leader; Senator Tom Connally (D., Tex), ranking Democratic member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, and Senator Scott W. Lucas (D., Ill.), who will represent Alben W. Barkley (Ky.), Senate Democratic leader now in Europe.

Representative Leslie C. Arends (R., Ill.), House whip who will represent Speaker Joseph W. Martin (R., Mass.), who has a conflicting speaking date; Representative Charles A. Halleck (Ind.), House Republican leader; Representative Charles A. Eaton (R., N. J.), chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee; Representative Sam Rayburn (Tex.), House House Democratic leader; Representative Sol Bloom (D., N. Y.), ranking Democratic member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

Submarine Saves 6 Army Airmen Down in Pacific

Pearl Harbor, Sept. 26 (AP).—A United States submarine today rescued six Army airmen in a remote area of the Pacific 330 miles southwest of Truk after they had spent 28 hours in life rafts, the Pacific Submarine Command announced.

The submarine, identified as the Chivo, commanded by William R. Crutcher of Tuscaloosa, Ala., and San Diego, Calif, made a 450-mile forced dash after the fliers' C-54 transport was "ditched" at sea.

The rescued men were listed as Capt. S. H. McFawn, Lieuts. D. E. Simors, D. M. Garret and S. Mininika, T/Sergt. W. S. Burns, and S/Sergt. T. A. Reynolds, members of the Twenty-first Troop Carrier Squadron. The submarine commander reported all were in good condition.

Text of Truman Statement on European Aid

President Truman yesterday issued the following statement on the Marshall Plan to aid Europe:

THE Secretary of State has transmitted to me the official report of the Committee of European Economic Cooperation, prepared by the representatives of 16 nations who have been meeting in Paris since early July. At my request Secretary Marshall is sending a message to the chairman of the committee, Foreign Minister Bevin, acknowledging receipt of the report by the United States Government.

As the document itself states, it is an "initial report," and is subject to review and revision. Nonetheless, it reflects an unprecedented effort at economic cooperation by the 16 countries participating in the Paris conference. In the light of the political tensions and the economic instability in Europe, it is an important and encouraging first step that these nations had the initiative and determination to meet together and produce this report.

World Welfare at Stake

The problem to which this report is addressed not only underlies the political and economic well-being of Europe but is also of key importance to a stable peace in the world. The people of the United States recognize, as do the people of the European nations, that the earliest practicable achievement of economic health, and consequent political stability, in Europe is of utmost importance for the peace and well-being of the world.

I NOTE that the program presented in the report is based on the four following lines of action by the 16 European nations:

(1) A strong productive effort; (2) the creation of internal financial stability; (3) maximum cooperation among the participating countries; and (4) a solution to the trading deficit with the American continent, particularly by exports. These are sound principles and will appeal to the common sense of the American people. Their effective translation into practice is vital both to European recovery and to world-wide economic health.

While the 16-nation committee has been meeting in Paris, the United States Government has been proceeding with complementary studies on this side of the Atlantic.

Last June I appointed three committees to study the relationship between aid which may be extend to foreign countries and the interests of our domestic economy. One of these, headed by the Secretary of the Interior, has been making a study of the state of our natural resources. Another of these studies, relating to the impact on our national economy of aid to other countries, is being conducted by the councily of economic advisers. The third group, a nonpartisan committee of distinguished citizens under the chairmanship of the Secretary of Commerce, was requested to determine the character and quantities of United States resources available for assistance to foreign countries and to advise the President on the limits within which the United States may safely and wisely plan to extend such assistance.

Other agencies of the executive branch of the Government have also been considering the role which should be played by the United States in European recovery.

THE GREAT interest of the Congress in this subject has been remonstrated by the number of its members whom it has sent abroad to study prevailing conditions at first hand.

We shall need to consult with representatives of the European committee to obtain clarification and amplification of the initial report and to obtain further information, as it becomes available, as to the specific measures to be adopted by the participating countries in carrying out the principles set forth in the report.

I am requesting the special committees which I appointed and other Government agencies to appraise the information received from the European committee in the light of the studies they have conducted. The results of this appraisal will be made available to the appropriate congressional committees.

On the basis of these studies, which will go forward without delay, the facts will be presented and recommendations will be formulated so that the American people, through their representatives in Congress, can determine to what extent and in what manner the resources of the United States may be brought to the support of the renewed European efforts to achieve sustained economic recovery.

WHEN the American people are satisfied as to the scope of the necessary program and the sufficiency of measures of self-help and mutual help being taken by the European countries, and when we can determine what resources we should and can wisely make available, I am sure that we shall respond as quickly as possible.

Meanwhile certain problems have arisen in connection with the economic situation in Europe that are of such an urgent nature that their solution cannot awati the careful study required for the over-all decisions which will be based on the reports. These problems are of an emergency nature which demand immediate attention.

It is for this reason that I have requested a group of congressional leaders to meet with me on Monday, September 29, to discuss plans for determining the action to be taken by the United States to aid in preserving the stability and promoting the recovery of the nations which participated in the Paris Conference.

Registration Urged Of All Over 15 in U. S.

New York, Sept. 25 (AP).—Rear Admiral Russell S. Berrey, commander of the New York Naval Base, recommended today the "complete registration of every man and woman from 15 years up" for classification for emergency duty in the event of another war.

He told the Propeller Club of New York in an address that this was the only "satisfactory manner" in which the National Security Resources Board could accomplish the duties assigned it.

Traffic Toll Reaches 54

W. Snyder, Francis P. Snyder and John Snyder, all of Washington.

The District traffic death, police said, resulted when Fuller apparently walked against a red light at 14th and K sts. nw. into the path of a car driven by John P. Devenney, 32, of 1529 Quincy ave., Falls Church, Va.

Fuller, who came to Washington about eight months ago to care for a brother, Edward, 78, who was ill, was pronounced dead at Emergency Hospital at 2:15 p. m. by Dr. Robert Miller. Death was attributed to a basal fracture of the skull. Police said Fuller had been staying at the Edison Hotel, 1114 13th st. nw.

Police Get Clew

Meanwhile, police came closer to solving the hit-and-run accident at 14th st. and Massachusetts ave. se. late Wedneseday night which sent Robert E. Davis, 16-year-old newsboy, of 223 15th st. se., to Casualty Hospital with a compound fracture of the left leg, a fractured right arm and multiple abrasions of the head.

Witnesses told police the boy was struck down by a speeding car which did not stop. While the boy was being taken to the hospital in serious condition, police flashed a lookout for the car. The car was found abandoned today at 14th and G sts. ne.

A radiator ornament found at the scene of the accident fitted the abandoned car. The car was the property of Mrs. Violet A. Quinn of 417 36th st. ne.

Mrs. Quinn told police her husband had parked the car in front of the house at 6 p. m. Wednesday and that it was observed there as late as 9 p. m.

Two Youths Questioned

Police picked up a 16-year-old youth and his 19-year-old companion. Police said the latter youth has previously been convicted of auto theft. Police matched fingerprints of the two youths but they did not coincide with any found in the abandoned car.

The Quinns, the two youths and three witnesses to the accident will meet today in the offices of the Police Accident Investigation Unit in an effort to clarify the case.

MR. AND MRS. JOSEPH ELLIS

Police had another puzzler in trying to determine who was the driver of a cab which at 1:42 a. m. yesterday hit a curb on the 14th st. overpass over Maine ave., skidded and smashed into a light pole on an island in the center of the bridge.

Three men and a 17-year-old youth were in the cab, and one of the men, Harry W. Mullen, 50, of 1616 S st. nw., has been tentatively listed by police as the driver.

Mullen was transfered to Gallinger Hospital after treatment at Emergency Hospital. He was in serious condition with possible fractures of the spine and neck and lacerations of the back.

The other occupants of the cab were:

Percy Anderson, 45, of 1618 S st. nw., who was released after treatment at Emergency and Gallinger for injuries to his right shoulder and shock.

Alonzo Robinson, 46, of 1515 Swann st. nw., whose condition was "fair," was treated at Emergency and then transferred to Gallinger with a possible fractured skull and internal injuries, a fractured ankle, back injuries and scalp lacerations.

Monroe Leonoff, 17, of 625 S. Fillmore st., Arlington, who was admitted to Emergency with a neck injury and possible brain concussion.

Forestville to Hold Horse Show Tomorrow

The second annual Forestville Horse Show will be held at 10 a. m. tomorrow at Dunrovin Acres, the Richard A. Wheeler estate at Forestville, Va.

Hunter, jumper and gaiter championships and 21 classes are scheduled.

The event, licensed by the American Horse Shows Association, has attracted front rank entries from the foremost stables of Maryland, Virginia and the District, the show committee reported. Paul Y. Rosenberg is committee chairman.

Fire Prevention Week

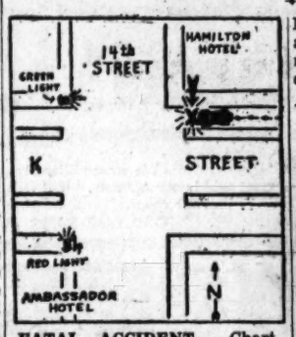
NEWSBOY HIT-AND-RUN VICTIM—Robert E. Davis, 16-year-old newsboy of 223 15th st. se., in Casualty Hospital with a fractured arm and leg, is consoled by his mother, Mrs. R. F. Davis. The youth was struck by a hit-and-run driver late Wednesday night at 14th st. and Massachusetts ave. se.



FATAL ACCIDENT — Chart, based on police reports, indicates how Harry H. Fuller, 72, of Milford, Ohio, was injured fatally by an auto at 14th and K sts. nw., yesterday at 1:25 p. m.

Two Cleared of Manslaughter Charges

Two motorists involved in separate Prince Georges County accidents, which resulted in the death of three persons, were cleared of manslaughter charges in Hyattsville Police Court yesterday.

James L. Day, 22, 4813 Auburn ave., Bethesda, was found guilty of reckless driving May 11, 1947, and was fined $100 and costs and given a six-month suspended jail sentence. The second defendant, Henry M. Botts, 22, 224 10th st. se., was acquitted of reckless driving in addition to the manslaughter charge.

Day was listed by police as the driver of a taxicab which crashed into a telephone pole and hurtled over a 12-foot embankment on Baltimore blvd. at Beltsville, resulting in the death of Hosie Courtney, 23, 7424 Wisconsin ave., Bethesda. Four other occupants of the cab, including the driver, were injured.

Police said Botts was the operator of a car which fatally injured two pedestrians, Crettie Smith, 48, and George Frost, 59, both of Bladensburg, on Annapolis rd. at Bladensburg on August 22. Police testified the two were struck while crossing the highway between intersections.

In another case heard yesterday, Judge Alan Bowie levied a $50 fine on Willie Szillat, 32, of Beltsville, on a charge of assault. Szillat admitted punching his neighbor, Harlie Easter, because Easter laughed when the defendant's small son fell down.

Pork Price Drop Credited To Housewives

Mrs. Housewife's stubborn resistance to record-high meat prices was credited with a victory yesterday as wholesale prices of pork dropped 5 cents a pound in Greater Washington.

Representatives of large meat packing houses here said the decline was a reflection of lower prices in the West, but declared that no large-scale cut in other meat prices is expected.

The general counsel of the wholesale meat division, Merchants and Manufacturers Association, said many dealers "had to sell their meat at below their usual prices just to turn it over." He said wholesalers will join consumers in fighting the high prices by "not buying as heavily as before."

The chairman of the food section of the association, Raymond C. Briggs, agreed that the meat market was "a little draggy." He reported price drops of 4 to 5 cents on lamb and pork loin and a cent drop on beef.

Spokesmen for two major meat wholesalers confirmed the pork and beef cuts. One firm declared the meat market had contracted because of "marked consumer resistance" and was unusually sluggish. Cool weather, however, is expected to force a rise in the demand for meats.

Butter and egg prices continued high, although one major dealer here declared that some reduction may be expected by "three months from now" since futures quotations had been dropping. The price of oleomargarine, which usually follows the trend in butter prices, has remained "steading," indicating little change in demand for the butter substitute, dealers said.

Bridle Trails Unit To Hold Show in Rock Creek Park

The Washington Bridle Trails Association will hold its second all-member horse show on Equitation Field in Rock Creek Park at 10 a. m. Sunday.

Divided into two groups for stable-owned and privately owned horses, the show offers a grand prize trophy to each division horse accumulating the highest points in the May 4 and Sunday events.

Leaders from the early season show are Robert C. Lee's Bonne Fille with 7 points and Brownie of the Potomac Riding School with 8.

In addition to the grand prize trophies, the champion of the privately owned division will receive the Earll of Hazewood vase, a perpetual challenge award placed in competition in 1845.

Churchill's 1937 Auto Abandoned by Thief

London, Sept. 25 (U.P.).—A car thief walked into a parking lot yesterday, picked out a 10-year-old black sedan and drove off. A few miles later he apparently realized the automobile was "hot loot" and abandoned it, undamaged.

The car belonged to Winston Churchill.

Wholesale Meat Dealers Face Problem on Shrinkage

Wholesale meat dealers, already faced with consumer resistance to prevailing prices, yesterday had a new headache.

A retail grocer purchased 71 pounds of pork loin from a District meat wholesaler. Leaving the establishment, he was inclined to think he may have been short-weighted. He checked the parcel on another wholesaler's scale and found it weighed 67¼ pounds.

The grocer told his woeful tale to Inspector R. W. Reeder of the District Weights and Measures Department, who took him to Assistant Corporation Counsel Robert F. Kneipp.

Yesterday Kneipp summoned the wholesaler, who declared that meat shrinks in transit and that such shrinkage was generally accepted by meat buyers. He told Kneipp that if he were prosecuted for short-weighting, the repercussions might force a complete revamping of meat trade practices.

Kneipp asked Inspector Reeder to make a survey of shrinking practices in the wholesale and retail circles and to recommend what action, if any, should be taken in the matter. He tabled action on the retailer's complaint pending completion of the survey.

The "shrinkage" results from the evaporation of moisture, such as blood, in the meat. Often the paper and box in which the meat is packed absorbs 1 to 2 per cent of the total weight by sopping up the moisture, according to one meat official.

Barrett's Protest

When Major Barrett returns to Washington and has an opportunity to make the thorough study he has promised of the FBI crime report, he will conclude, we think, that the need is for reform rather than for explanation or expostulation. This was what happened in respect of The Washington Post's revelations about the pocketing of crimes; the superintendent first denounced the disclosure, then, to his credit, acknowledged that he had been in error and set about correcting a deplorable situation.

In regard to the FBI's report, he is now in the stage of saying it isn't so. "I don't know," he declared in Duluth, "whether the other cities cited reported crime as extensively as we do in Washington." The answer is that a number of other cities cited by the FBI do use the same statistical system as Washington—New York, Chicago, St. Louis and Baltimore among them. In comparison with these, Washington's record is altogether lamentable. What the community wants is not extenuation but correction. We should think that this would be the first aim of its Commissioners as well as of its superintendent of police.

Steel Bottlenecks

Continuing steel shortages have put the steel industry on the defensive against charges that failure to expand its productive capacity has resulted in repeated layoffs of workers in steel-consuming industries. The industry is also accused of deliberately holding down production in order to reap the high profits of scarcity, thereby preventing other industries dependent on steel from achieving high and continuous levels of employment. Spearheading the present drive for expansion of steel-producing capacity is Walter P. Reuther, president of the United Automobile Workers, whose members have suffered serious wage losses due to periodical automobile factory shutdowns caused by steel shortages.

Steel company executives admit that the amount of steel currently being produced falls short of demand, although the American Iron and Steel Institute states that the gap between supply and demand would be much narrower than it now is if 12 million tons of finished steel products had not been lost last year in a series of major strikes. The recent railroad strike that shut down four Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corp. plants also caused a loss of about 180,000 tons of steel, thus cutting steel quotas of the corporation's customers.

Some argue, as does Mr. Reuther, that the industry should immediately launch a development program designed to provide much larger quantities of steel in the next four years to step up the output of automobiles, freight cars and other durable goods. Otherwise, they predict, there will not be enough steel available by 1950 to insure maintenance of full employment. In reply, spokesmen for the steel industry assert that if the production rate achieved in the first half of the year is maintained, the 1947 output of steel ingots and castings will be 18 million tons higher than in any previous peacetime year. Moreover, the American Iron and Steel Institute says that the industry's plans for an increase of 3 million tons of sheet and strip mill capacity have been delayed by the inability of machinery and equipment suppliers to make deliveries on schedule. Shortages of scrap steel, of which we lost millions of tons during the war, have also held down steel production. (The War Department is now belatedly trying to turn into scrap, for the benefit of the industry, some of its obsolete equipment and ammunition.) Threatened shortages of iron ore and coking coal also have to be taken into account in weighing the case for and against a rapid expansion of steel-making capacity.

In addition to all these material obstacles to the carrying out of ambitious expansion plans, the most cogent argument of all against expansion plans on the Reuther scale is the belief of leading steel executives that such an investment would entail excessive risks of loss. The present demand for steel is admittedly abnormal—the result of a rush to satisfy pent-up demands that could not be met during the war years. Steel executives testified recently before a Senate Subcommittee on Small Business that the industry should be able to catch up with demand within the next two years with its present capacity and contemplated additions. Consequently, they are unwilling to embark on an expansion program that might leave them with a large amount of idle capacity when conditions return to normal. Indeed, the results might be catastrophic if the present boom were to be followed by a depression. Furthermore, it has to be kept in mind that a large steel-expansion program would divert steel from immediate consumer use and aggravate labor scarcities.

Under our system of private industry operated for profit, it is left to the judgment of managerial heads to determine the pace of expansion. If they decide that conditions do not warrant financing expansion programs, they cannot justly be accused of evading their responsibilities as directing business heads. Their policies must be governed by considerations of cost and profitability. If the American people no longer want our kind of free-enterprise industrial system based on private investment for profit, the alternative is to nationalize our basic industries and let the taxpayers shoulder the cost of mistakes of judgment. Mr. Reuther at least is well aware that such is the alternative, for he urges the Government to step in and provide additional steel-making facilities, if the industry will not do it.

Beginning To Move

The 16 nations who wrote the Economic Recovery Program, commonly called the Marshall Plan, wound up with a dramatic flourish. They decided to send over the complete document by air. The British furnished a special plane, as well as an escort in the person of one of their diplomatic couriers, whom they call King's messengers. It was hoped that Secretary Marshall would receive the document at an appropriate ceremony. However, the Secretary, who is at present head of the American delegation to the U. N. General Assembly in New York, felt that in this circumstance the proper recipient was the State Department. There was some disappointment over the absence of a reciprocal gesture by the men who initiated the get-together of western Europe. But the disappointment will now be assuaged by the President's statement acknowledging the report as "an unprecedented effort at economic cooperation" and as "an important and encouraging first step."

The President goes on to outline the next procedure in the consideration of the Marshall Plan. On this there had been some puzzlement. As we expected, the presidential committees, particularly, we assume, the 19-man group headed by Secretary Harriman, will seek "clarification and amplification of the initial report" and obtain "further information, as it becomes available, as to the specific measures to be adopted by the participating countries in carrying out the principles set forth in the report." That is highly important. To the President is remitted the job of mobilizing America to do its part in making the Plan work. He must have something to go on—something more substantial than the initial report. The June 5 request for a blueprint of "a working economy" for Europe called for "self-help and mutual help" as the desideratum. Both need to be spelled out in order to persuade the American people that deeds will accompany words. In a number of respects i's have to be dotted and t's have to be crossed. A bill of particulars is required as to what is to be done in achieving fiscal and currency stability—the condition precedent of success. As for "mutual help" there has not yet been time to work out details of joint projects, particularly to correlate Europe's steel industry. That these uncertainties have been left in the initial report is explicable by the fact that the Europeans had only three months of deliberation. Governments and businessmen are left to fill out the pledges of the experts of the Paris Cooperation Committee. To them it needs to be emphasized that American support can be assured only as the American people are persuaded of action in attacking the problem of European reconstruction at the roots.

In the meantime there is what has come to be called the Marshall Gap Plan to consider—that is to say, the stopgap aid to a hungry Europe. Evidently the President has not made up his mind about a special session of Congress. At any rate, he has deferred a decision till he sees the congressional leaders on Monday. But he has set unofficial machinery in motion for the conservation of food—in the form of a Citizens Food Committee of distinguished Americans under the chairmanship of Mr. Charles Luckman, head of Lever Brothers. We welcome the step as a measure not only to save food but also to arouse the American people. At the same time it is no substitute for official action; it is only supplemental to it. Money is needed, and only Congress can authorize and appropriate it. The feeding season is at hand, and our precious wheat is beginning to disappear down the throats of our livestock since the price situation makes it profitable for the farmers to sell their wheat in the form of meat. Only Congress can return to the President the allocation powers with which to unite compulsion to persuasion.

Indonesia's Travail

Hope of ending the hostilities in Indonesia seems to be brighter than at any time since the beginning of the Dutch "police action" in July. Clashes between Dutch and Indonesian forces are still occurring in spite of the Security Council's intervention. But a new approach to negotiations is being made under the most favorable auspices. After the Security Council last month suggested a Committee on Good Offices to deal with the dispute, the Netherlands chose Belgium and the Indonesian Republic chose Australia to serve on that committee. Those two have now chosen the United States as the third member, and our Government has accepted the nomination. If there is any means of bringing the parties to a new understanding, after their relations have been embittered by more than two months of war, this three-power peace mission should be able to find it.

No doubt the Committee on Good Offices will be substantially aided by the findings of the Committee of Career Consuls which was set up by the Security Council to ferret out the facts regarding nonobservance of its cease-fire orders. Those orders proved to be notoriously ineffective, and each side blamed the other for continuing provocative activities. Underlying the whole situation, however, is the fact that the republican government at Jogjakarta has not been able to enforce its policies in the face of opposition from armed local chieftains. Indeed, the Dutch insist that there would have been no occasion for them to attempt to reassert their authority in Indonesia if the Republican leaders had been able to carry out their agreement of last March. An intelligent and well-intentioned group has set up an independent government for Indonesia, but the real power of local administration remains in the hands of local leaders who are often less intelligent and less well-intentioned. Since these groups are armed it will undoubtedly take time to win their submission to any centralized government in Indonesia.

Here is the chief problem with which the peace mission will have to grapple. We suspect that Premier Amir Sjahrifoedin himself had this problem in mind when he suggested the other day that a third power—probably the United States or Great Britain—guarantee any future agreement that the republic might make with the Netherlands. The republic will need help in getting its authority established and generally recognized, and Premier Sjahrifoedin does not wish to be wholly dependent upon the Dutch for aid of this sort. It is not surprising, of course, that the republic should have manifested critical weakness. Stable governments do not suddenly spring into being from the desire of a people to be free and independent. They have to evolve step by step over a period of years. The real test of the negotiations soon to be renewed in Indonesia will be whether the two sides can compromise the need for republican experimentation and the equally urgent need for law and order. Considering the animosities that the fighting has engendered and the great difficulty of transferring authority from armed bands to a government of law, continued neutral assistance of some sort would doubtless enhance the possibilities of achieving genuine republican government in Indonesia.

Political Wives

Mrs. Taft, who had them in the aisles at her meeting in Seattle Wednesday, has had the courage to depart from the traditional tight-lipped role of the wife of an aspiring presidential candidate. But will party strategists permit her to continue this role if Senator Taft becomes the Republican nominee? In all the campaigns against President Roosevelt, opposition leaders sought to create the impression that their candidates' wives were purely domestic little women who minded their business and didn't meddle in politics. Doubtless the controversial public activities of Mrs. Roosevelt prompted this strategy. Hence Mrs. Alfred M. Landon, Mrs. Wendell Willkie and Mrs. Thomas E. Dewey limited their campaign activities to shaking hands and being photographed. As little as possible was said of Mrs. Landon's former business activities and public welfare pursuits, of Mrs. Dewey's former concert career, and of the social consciousness that Mrs. Willkie later was to demonstrate in public activities. Mrs. Truman also has kept to the standardized, silent role of a First Lady.

It has long been a tradition in both parties to emphasize the domestic virtues, or at least the parlor ornament possibilities, of candidates' wives. Nevertheless, wives of Presidents and of presidential candidates have occasionally stepped out of this hair wreath picture. It is likely that more will do so in the future. For women voters now constitute more than half of the electorate. The Women's Division of the Republican National Committee estimates from Gallup Poll reports that women cast a little more than half of the 48,025,684 votes in the 1944 presidential election. Candidates' wives can do much to reach this vote. Also, there is growing recognition that the voting public is rightly concerned with the beliefs and attitudes of wives of men seeking important public offices. Few voters are so naive as not to know that the wives of most public men exercise strong influence on their views and actions—despite wifely protestations of political ignorance.

Increasingly, marriage is becoming a partnership in which husbands and wives share each other's interests and responsibilities. Lady Cripps, wife of Sir Stafford Cripps, president of Britain's Board of Trade, has aptly pointed out what has become the modern role of the wife of a man in public life. Such a wife, she says, should not merely keep herself fully informed of her husband's work, but should help him translate his problems into human needs. No wonder that an Indian leader who met Lady Cripps when he was in London said of her, "She must mean a great deal to a man."

CATBIRD

Suddenly
the vine becomes alive and from the tangled leaves the mourning feathers, velvet-dark,
stir softly—
the unexpected song, the quick derisive note
out of the silken throat . . .
the catbird's call.
Unruffled, prim,
coaxing, scolding, teasing,
the tail tipped forward,
two onyx beads for eyes,
he moves along the hedgerows and the shrubs, half mimicry, half laughter,
mewing kitten-wise,
the song flowing after.

Denham's Interpretation

The speech delivered on September 23, by NLRB General Counsel, Robert N. Denham, before the labor relations section of the American Bar Association in Cleveland, contains several statements so appallingly inaccurate that I believe it imperative that public attention be directed to them.

Section 10 (j) of the Taft-Hartley Act provides that the Board may, on issuance of a complaint charging unfair labor practices, apply to the court for a restraining order to enjoin continuance of the practices during the pendency of the proceedings before the Board. The act is clear that the unfair practices referred to include unfair practices of employers as well as those of unions. In other words, the Board may apply for a restraining order against either.

But Mr. Denham's speech leaves the very definite implication that he believes the Board can move only against unions and not against employers. Thus he states:

"Having broken down the injunction barrier in the cases just referred to, the Congress went even further, and in Section 10 (j) has authorized the Board to seek injunctions, and the court to issue them, where any unfair labor practice has been charged and a complaint issued, in order to restrain the continuance of such unfair labor practices by the labor organization during the adjudication of issues raised by the charge of the employer."

Not one syllable of Mr. Denham's speech adverts to the fact that injuctions may be obtained by the General Counsel against employers. It seems obvious that the General Counsel of the NLRB has already determined in his mind that, as far as he is concerned, this provision will be used against unions only.

Mr. Denham in his speech says that the Taft-Hartley Act merely equalizes the asserted one-sidedness of the Wagner Act. Yet, in interpreting the new statute, Mr. Denham has already read out of it a provision which is applicable against employers as well as against unions.

Is it any wonder that unions are fearful not only of the legislative monstrosity labeled the Taft-Hartley Act but, as well, of the vicious administration that will be given the act by those entrusted with its enforcement?

"Don't Wear Them"

This correspondent dislikes to believe statements indicating that designers of feminine apparel are motivated primarily by dollar-grubbing considerations in attempting to foist their current creations onto the shapely backs of women. Nor does he like to believe, as has been frequently intimated, that dress designers are psychological misfits who with the tortuous and nefarious workings of cunning minds are naively revenging themselves on womanhood for imagined persecutions. To discard these premises, however, is to be forced to consider that the designers, at best, are unimaginative and uninspired; that they are reverting to styles of a bygone day because of their jaded inability to create new beauty despite the wealth of color and new materials at their disposal. Such sterility in a field of art usually signifies decadent degeneracy, a conclusion which seems inescapable in this instance.

The writer recently was exposed to a magazine article which callously proclaimed that the new styles would take one back to the turn of the century and that the slavish devotees of fashion's cabalistic cult would be rewarded by looking like a heroine out of a novel by Thomas Hardy or like grandmother did as a girl.

Despite the general drabness and conservativeness of their raiment, men have never been confronted in recent times by a serious effort to clothe them in the powdered wigs or doublets of antiquity. Is it significant then that women are considered fair commercial prey and that these attempts to bully them are made with impunity and effrontery? Ladies, here is a challenge to your moral fiber! Refuse to allow a self-appointed clique to bedevil you at will, for if this plot once succeeds, like blackmail, it will know no end. Let the "new" dresses serve to surround surplus potatoes, a function in exquisite keeping with their fundamental design . . . but don't wear them!!!

"Round And Round"

K. W. B. in a letter to the editor on September 20, finds solace in her supposition that "seamstresses will be kept busy altering skirts, thus giving work to many not otherwise occupied."

You're so right, K. W. B. And to satisfy the whims of designers, the pockets of clothing manufacturers and the vast army of unemployed seamstresses, we could revert to short skirts six months hence. Round and round we go!

Fountains And Pools

There are two beautiful water fountains facing our Union Station. On an extremely warm day I recently noticed several children in bathing suits hovering on the outside of the enclosure which surrounds these fountains. Some of the children's suits were wet which meant that they had managed to get into the water for a brief second. Looking important and fully in charge of the matter was a man who evidently was the caretaker of the grounds. He was shooing children in every direction.

These were Negro children who were warm and wanted to swim. There are a total of five swimming pools provided for Negro children in the District of Columbia; two of these pools are privately owned. The privately owned pools are located on the campus of Howard University and in the Young Men's Christian Association building. The pools provided for Negro children by the District are: Francis Junior High School, Dunbar High School and Banneker Junior High School—Dunbar High School pool is the only pool that is open the year round. There are more than twice as many pools provided for white children in the District of Columbia—excluding the privately owned pools. Why I ask myself do we here in the Capital of the United States let our children for the lack of an adequate number of swimming pools try to swim in a water fountain that perhaps costs just as much to build as one pool? We would rather have the water fountain I suppose.

Preservation of Olympic Park

We note with interest the letter on the Olympic boundary revision by Lester T. Parker, Aberdeen, Wash., published in The Washington Post of September 22.

The information given out by Mr. Parker in that letter is designated to mislead and ultimately to deprive the people of a national heritage.

Of the few areas in the Northwest where the lumber industry has not destroyed the forests, the rain forest of the Olympic National Primeval Park is the most magnificent. Unfortunately, the lumber interests in the vicinity of the park have ruthlessly cut, without thought for future needs, the forests surrounding the park. Now they look upon the park forest with longing. Should the Olympic rain forest be made available to them, it would last four years, bringing some temporary income to the loggers. In its present condition, the forest is bringing tourists into the area, and this means wealth to the nearby communities. The logging concerns have raised a great cry, but it must be remembered that logging is not the only enterprise on the Olympic Peninsula. National parks are big business to neighboring communities — and that means permanent business.

Mr. Parker speaks about the intention to log the forest selectively. Let me state here, that logging selectively is not practiced in the Northwest forests. Clear cutting is the only method used. Then the land is usually burned over, and that destroys the seeds that might have produced another forest fit for cutting within 75 or 100 years. Today, much of the peninsula's cutover land consists of fire-blackened snags with no young trees coming along. If the logging interests had been restoring the cutover land and protecting it from fire, they would not feel the need to invade the park forest. They have neglected their duty to themselves and to the Nation, and that is the rule of the lumber industry all over our country. To give the Olympic firms the rain forest now, will only postpone the day when they must begin restoration.

Perhaps the most serious phase of this move to invade the Olympic National Primeval Park is the precedent it sets for the invasion of other national parks by similar groups. The national parks belong to the people, and not to a privileged few for a special use that would destroy them forever.

Mr. Parker speaks about H. R. 4053 and the commission of nine members that it proposes to set up to study what areas now within the park are valuable primarily for timber, mineral and other resources. Your readers should know about that commission: Six of the nine would represent local interests, including representatives from the lumber employes, the West Coast Lumberman's Association, the civic and farming interests of Gray's Harbor, the towns of Port Angeles and Port Townsend and the State Game Commission. The remaining three would represent the National Park Service, the U. S. Forest Service and the National Parks Association. The National Parks Association was proposed to be included in the commission without the association's consent.

To show the association's views on this proposed commission, I give you here a statement made by Field Secretary Fred M. Packard at the hearings held in Port Angeles on September 16 and 17 by the House Public Lands Committee:

"While the association is eager to cooperate with Congress in any way to promote the national welfare, the integrity of the association requires that it serve only on commissions honestly designed to come to unbiased conclusions. It is proper that the various members of a commission represent various points of view, but any commission established by Congress should represent primarily the people of the entire country, not a local segment of the population, since it deals with matters of national interest."

Calling Washington

Greek Inflation

ATHENS, GREECE—Traveling across Europe today is a curious adventure in the arithmetic of currencies that have lost much of their meaning and value for the people who use them. The frane, lira, the zloty, the mark, even the good old British pound slither up and down in response to the doubts and fears that beset Europe.

But it is here in this arena where East and West are contending that money becomes a kind of fourth dimension reflecting the slightest change in the political landscape. The Greek drachma is an amazingly sensitive seismograph for the tremors shaking the earth far below the surface.

THE LEGAL RATE of exchange at the Bank of Greece is 5000 draghmas to the dollar. It is wholly unrealistic in terms of purchasing power. Twice that amount would be a more nearly accurate appraisal of the drachma's value and there are rumors of a revaluation.

Because the legal rate puts such a penalty on visitors who must pay inflated prices, most Americans passing through get at least part of their drachmas on the black market. It's like prohibition days back home. You are told to go around the corner and ask for Joe.

Joe is an amiable fellow who secretes great chunks of paper money on his person. He is always glad to see you, just as was the bootlegger, because he will make a good profit out of his transaction with you. He gives you, say, 8000 drachmas for an American dollar, with the rate a little lower for traveler's checks.

Two days later it is only 7600 to the dollar. You ask Joe what has happened to bring about the change.

"They think new Sophoulis government may be good government," Joe says, grinning.

A week later it is back to 8000. Joe explains that there is bad news about the rebels in the north. "They no like it," says Joe of the mysterious powers who are presumed to preside over the economic destinies of Greece.

Joe seemed to me to be the best possible barometer of what was happening. I could never discover how the rate was fixed on his private bourse. But at least he always had a plausible explanation for the rapid shifts that occurred. Once when the drachma rose a little it was because, Joe reported cheerfully, three American ships were discharging food and clothing in the harbor.

HOW THE ordinary citizen of Athens manages to live is a mystery. The threatened strike recently of civil servants surprised no one familiar with the immense difficulties of day-to-day living. The strike was averted with the aid and advice of the American mission, since a strike would have meant further delay for a program that has already suffered from far too many delays. The Greek government added another 100 billion drachmas to its budget to cover the increased pay of government employes.

Prices in the shops are based on the value of the gold sovereign. They are out of sight for the average Athenian, who can stare only wistfully at a quite ordinary dress with the price mark of 200,000 drachmas and at a pair of shoes at 125,000 drachmas.

A gold sovereign is worth about $30 in United States currency. But the British, using pounds, can buy sovereigns for about one third of that. There are other inequities. Members of the United States Embassy staff have been able to exchange their dollars for 12,000 to 14,000 drachmas because the Embassy employs a tremendous advantage over members of the mission staff who have had to take 5000 or go into the black market for 8000 or 9000.

To the visitor who gets a hotel bill of 933,000 drachmas for a week, it seems pure fantasy. But for the Greeks this is practically normal. Two years ago they went through an inflation that sent the drachma to a trillion to the dollar. A pair of shoe laces cost two billions.

A realistic revaluation of the drachma is overdue. It would reduce the black marketing and the speculating which a mass of regulations cannot stop. Another essential step is to pare away the blight of red tape that makes it difficult to observe the law. Changing a few dollars at the Bank of Greece takes an hour and a dozen forms. Joe takes three or four minutes to a transaction. This is the time, while American aid is moving into Greece, to try to get a little more stability into the fluttery drachma and put Joe out of business.

"Another Victim"

I find it extremely painful to accept the fact that your editorial of September 20, "Another Victim," was written by an American citizen. While our most splendid national traditions emphasize the self-respect and self-reliance of the individual citizen as the foundation of the American character, you have the amazing contempt for human dignity to suggest that the "best defense against personal injury lies in no defense."

The counter arguments to your major points are so obvious and so much a part of the American viewpoint that no rebuttal is called for among free citizens of a free country—but it should be pointed out that when and if, God forbid, the attitude expressed in your editorial (and previous ones on the same subject) becomes significant in this country we will have forfeited our heritage and become the properly docile human sheep suitable for the imposition of all the paternalistic police powers prerequisite to the establishment of a police state.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph Alsop

A Dash Of Realpolitik

ROME, SEPT. 25—Exhausted by the dreary haggling, terrified by the paralysis of his own country, one of the leading American policy makers remarked in Paris that "it might be a good thing" if one of the great western European nations were engulfed in the Soviet tide. Such is the authentic, anxiously discussed report here. The meaning of the remark was that warnings were useless, only the grim actuality of capture by the Soviets of some vital part of the western world could galvanize the United States into adequate action.

ITALY IS nearest, at the moment, to giving this ordinarily calm and intelligent man his somewhat despairing wish. Perhaps he is right. Perhaps warnings are useless. Nonetheless, before saying farewell to the Italian situation, it will be well to try to estimate in detail the price of Italy.

First, what will happen here? As indicated in previous reports American abandonment of Italy in her present economic plight will almost certainly bring in a Communist-dominated government in the spring. Such a government will resemble the one now installed in Hungary, with a few Socialists and other stooges included more for show than use.

To be sure, the leader of the Communist-linked Socialists, the worthy, but Wallace-like Nenni, believes the Communists can be "controlled". Many other Italians, unable to imagine the misery and disorganization of the winter that menaces them, doubt whether their country can be dominated by a political party acting for a foreign power.

But Yugoslavia is just across the border, and obvious source of arms and aid. Italian Communist partisan units are already in existence, available to be quickly transformed into a secret police. As happened in Germany, many of the remaining, presently uninfluential neo-Fascist elements in the population will be available to be purchased and in the end, as any impartial observer can foresee, Communists controlling the government will again reduce the country to dictatorial rule.

In this event, a long sequence of results will immediately ensue. Italy, first of all, will retire behind the Iron Curtain, her markets will be closed, her goods denied to the other nations of the West. Thus one more, very drastic step toward total economic chaos will be taken; second, in the political sphere, the triumph of the Communists in the very source-place of western culture will have an electric effect all over the rest of western Europe. Democrats and Socialists everywhere, and especially in France, will lose heart and courage. With their already gigantic economic problems also increased, their power to resist the Communists in their own countries will be weakened to the vanishing point. The Italian Communist triumph, in short, will tend to push over all the neighboring non-Communist regimes. Once the tide has cut across the sand bar, it will not be halted until it has formed a vast lagoon.

Third, besides these obvious political and economic probabilities, there is the strategic certainty. Italy sticks down into the center of the Mediterranean in such a way that the Soviet Union, commanding Italy, will command the Mediterranean to east and west.

IN THE ITALIAN balance, in truth, hang Greece, Turkey, the Middle East with its vital oil resources, North Africa and all that these imply. These are what we passed the Greek-Turkish aid bill to withhold from the Soviet grip. These are the greatest strategic prizes in the whole struggle between the Soviet and western systems. If these come into Soviet hands, there will be no need to make delicate political and economic calculations about Britain's and western Europe's future. There will be no such future, until the situation is reversed by war or otherwise.

And this, of course, is precisely the issue that is at stake here in Italy and in western Europe. Will it be peace or war? That is the real question. If western Europe holds firm now, and returns again to healthy life, American foreign policy can be continued without risk of war. If Italy and western Europe fall before the Soviets, however, the United States will have suffered a political, strategic and diplomatic defeat of such magnitude that the very independence of the Western Hemisphere will hardly be maintained except by the most terrible of all means.

European Recovery

By Mark Sullivan

Sixteen Nations Plot Cooperation

AFTER Washington was informed of completion at Paris of the plan for economic cooperation by 16 European nations, discussion here was mainly about one aspect of it — the amount of help we are asked to give, our willingness to give and how much, and whether there should be a special session of Congress to act on this.

Sullivan

A basic aspect of this step by 16 European nations lies in its bearing on our relation to Russia. To put it briefly, 16 nations of western Europe have agreed to act together. They have done this without inclusion of Russia; that government was asked to participate but defiantly refused. Going further than refusal, the Russian government angrily warned against the step. Going still further it put a ban upon participation by some seven nations which it dominates or which are in fear of it. It was plain that some of these nations wished to cooperate but felt they could not go counter to Russia.

Here then are 16 European nations acting as a group, not only outside of Russia but with an attitude of recognized, cleavage from Russia, which that country itself imposes. Geographically, the 16 nations compose almost the whole of western Europe. They make a belt, running from Norway on the Arctic to Greece on the Mediterranean. The boundary between this belt and on the other side Russia and its satellites is a line of division, created by Russia's action, between that country and western Europe. The population of the 16 nations is upward of 200 millions, greater than that of Russia. The combined industrial strength of the group is infinitely greater than that of Russia. The 16 indeed, as a group, compose the largest unit of industrial strength in the whole world outside the United States.

THIS IMMENSE aggregate of strength is on our side in the conflict between us and Russia which, by Russia's wish and action, has come to be the central problem of the world, which has made the world two instead of one. Russia recognizes the enormous strengthening of our position which the action of the 16 European nations is. Much of Russia's recent violence of vituperation against us, and against Britain as a leader in bringing about the cooperation of the 16 nations, focuses upon the part we had in suggesting the cooperation, in the Marshall Plan which our Secretary of State suggested last June.

Indeed, there is a point of view which surmises that the extreme violence of recent Russian attack upon us is a hysteria of desperation—caused by recognition that the cooperation of the European nations means success for us in the world conflict; that Russia's refusal to take part in the cooperation and strenuous attempt to prevent it, will turn out to be a self-incurred fatality to Russia's hope to dominate the world.

It is this that we and Congress will need to bear in mind in acting upon the proposed help to get the European cooperation under way.

Historically the action of the 16 European nations is a step toward the suggestion, many times made in the past and recently urged by Winston Churchill, of a United States of Europe. While the present proposal looks to economic federation, some degree of political federation would almost necessarily follow.

WHAT THESE 16 European nations are doing has some parallel to what our original 13 states went through in arriving at national union. As we adopted freedom of trade between these states, the 16 European nations are moving toward leveling of economic barriers between them. One customs union has already been formed by the Netherlands, Belgium and Luxembourg, another is being formed by the four Scandinavian countries. And the report of the conference of the 16 nations at Paris suggests extension of these customs unions to include the other cooperating nations. Similar to our system, the report proposes that sources of electric energy, and of raw materials for industry, be developed without regard to national boundaries.

The purpose of these steps is to increase the industrial productivity of the European nations by mutual cooperation and self-help. This is what the Marshall Plan suggested as a preliminary and accompaniment of help from us. It rests on the fact that greater industrial productivity in Europe would diminish the aid needed from us.

Broader than that, economic cooperation of the European nations is a step toward the purpose that underlies everything, restoration of the world. In this light the step taken by these European nations is one cheering development in a world otherwise threatened with disintegration and beset by fear.

The Gallup Poll

Most Fear of War in 10 Years Found in U. S., Least in Australi

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Sept. 25.—The fiery speech of Andrei Y. Vishinsky, Russian Deputy Foreign Minister, before the United Nations has focused attention on the likelihood of another World War.

That people throughout the world are awake to the grim realities of international tension and conscious of the danger of war, is revealed by the latest opinion poll conducted by the International Association of Public Opinion (Gallup) Institutes in seven representative countries.

This latest survey is one of a series of international polls, to be conducted monthly by members of the International Association, formed last May by the 11 Gallup Poll affiliates around the world.

In each country an accurate cross-section of adult people was asked:

"DO YOU THINK THERE WILL, OR WILL NOT BE ANOTHER WAR WITHIN THE NEXT TEN YEARS?"

The weight of opinion in five of the seven countries leans to the fear that war is likely to break out again within a decade:

	Will Be War	Will Not	No Opin.
UNITED STATES	73%	18%	9%
Sweden	53	20	27
Norway	51	27	22
Denmark	45	27	28
Canada	42	33	25
Netherlands	39	43	18
France	35	35	30
Australia	35	50	15

In Italy a poll on the same question was conducted by DOXA (Italian Institute of Public Opinion) with the following results: Will be war, 59%; will not be war, 28%; no opinion, 13%.

In three countries, United States, Sweden and Norway, a separate cross-section, when asked the question on the basis of expecting war in 25 years instead of 10, returned the following responses:

	Will Be War	Will Not	No Opin.
Great Britain	48	31	21

Considerable numbers of people in Britain and Canada, also said they "expected war but not within 10 years." In all countries surveyed, many of those classified as having "no opinion" expressed a qualified view, usually in such statements as "there will be war if better order is not restored in the world; or "War will be prevented if the United Nations succeed in settling differences."

Hoover Says He WasMisquoted On U. S. Provoking Jap War

New York, Sept. 25 (INS).—Former President Herbert Hoover tonight denied published reports which quoted him as saying the United States never would have been attacked by the Japanese "if we had not given them provocation."

His denial was contained in a letter to the editor of the American Magazine, which carried an interview with Hoover in its September issue, written by Sidney Shalett.

The former President's letter stated:

"Mr. Shallett must have confused this with statements from interviews with someone else, as not only would I not have made such an indictment of a whole Nation, including myself, but also it is a contradiction to many other places where I am on public record.

"I had not thought hitherto that it was worth while making any public denial as few people would have believed that I said any such thing. However, Mr. Shallett's statement is having some repetition in the press and I am writing you to keep the record straight.

"Yours faithfully,

"HERBERT HOOVER."

Envoy to Soviet Called Here for Consultation

Ambassador Walter B. Smith will return to Washington from Moscow for "consultation," a State Department spokesman said yesterday. Smith was expected to arrive here next week.

The forthcoming consultation, it was explained, was planned at the time of Smith's last visit here six months ago. He will return to Moscow upon its completion.

Truman Talks Politics With N. Y. Chairman

Paul Fitzpatrick, New York State Democratic chairman, said yesterday after a conference with President Truman that they discussed New York State politics.

He said they did not touch on the Democratic National Committee chairmanship. Robert E. Hannegan reportedly will resign soon as national chairman because of poor health.

England Moves to Postpone 4-Power Ministers' Parley

London, Sept. 25 (AP).—A British move to postpone the London meeting of the four-power foreign ministers until the end of November because of the "full agenda" of the United Nations Assembly now meeting in New York was disclosed tonight by the Foreign Office.

A Foreign Office spokesman said the United States and France had agreed to delay the "Big Four" discussions on the German and Austrian peace treaties, originally scheduled to begin in early November, but that no reply had been received from Russia.

Reports from Moscow two weeks ago said informed foreign circles there believed Soviet leaders might regard the November treaty meeting as "superfluous." It was recalled in Moscow that Russia had objected to the recent British-American decision to raise the level of German industry, which it termed a violation of the Potsdam agreement.

Informed sources here said a delay in the resumption of the German-Austrian treaty talks, stalemated at the four power ministers meeting in Moscow last spring, would give more time to work out new British-American arrangements for increasing coal production in the Ruhr and bizonal industrial output.

The Soviet Union has taken a strongly critical attitude toward efforts to revive industry in western Germany.

If the foreign ministers meeting is delayed until late November, the meeting of the foreign ministers' deputies scheduled for October 6 to make preliminary arrangements for the council meeting also probably will be postponed.

The British spokesman said the United States and France, in agreeing to delay the council meeting, proposed that the deputies begin their meeting November 6 instead of October 6.

Educator Doubts Eisenhower Ability To Run University

Greeley, Col., Sept. 25 (U.P.).—Dr. George Willard Frasier, retiring president of the Colorado State College of Education, said today that "General Eisenhower knows no more about running a university than I know about running an army in time of battle."

Dr. Frasier made the statement at the first fall assembly of the student body as he lashed out against our national policy makers, and the number of military men now in key peacetime jobs.

"The United States seems headed for war, and our only salvation lies in education," he said. "But, for the first time in history, this Nation has more soldiers than teachers. Such a ratio points toward open conflict."

British Interest In Spain Problem Held Increasing

London, Sept. 25 (U.P.).—Indalecio Rieto, veteran Spanish Socialist leader, arrived from Paris today and political circles said his scheduled conference tomorrow with Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin increased British interest in solving the Spanish problem.

Prieto will be the first Spanish Republican exile leader to be received by Bevin. Although the initiative for the meeting originated with Prieto, political circles said Bevin agreeing to one was hardly a coincidence.

It was reliably reported that Prieto will seek the British reaction to formation of a Spanish Republican-Monarchist coalition government. Spanish moderate Socialists believe such a regime stands the best chance of easing out Generalissimo Francisco Franco by peaceful means.

U. S. Courts Held Burdened By Backlog of 51,281 Cases

Federal judges are burdened by a huge and growing load of cases, the administrative office of the United States Courts said yesterday.

Henry P. Chandler, the director, said in his report that if no new lawsuits began it would take the judges 11 months to decided the 51,281 now before them. Pending cases went up nearly 5000 in number during the last year.

Chandler pointed out that legal business, like the rest of the country, is getting back to a peacetime basis. The work load is heavier than before the war, because the country has grown bigger. But the courts have not.

Here in Washington, the number of cases filed in the District Court was between 6000 and 7000 a year until two years ago. In the fiscal year 1947 there were 8124 new cases filed. The 12 justices almost kept up with the heavier load, and their pending case total went only from 5707 to 5885. Chief Justice Bolitha J. Laws and his colleagues are settling cases in from six to nine months after they are filed.

The United States Court of Appeals here made progress, deciding 284 cases, while 264 were being filed. The total for all 11 Federal Courts of Appeal was 2615 filed, 2654 decided.

Chandler also reported that:

Claims under the wage-hour laws doubled in the last two years, without counting 2240 portal pay suits filed last year.

Bankruptcy cases went up about 30 per cent in the last year but were still few in number. Bankruptcies were at an all-time low last year. On June 30 there were 17,296 in the courts.

The only type of criminal case to fall off in the Federal courts was juvenile delinquency. These cases dropped 52 per cent in the last year, 1276 new cases being filed.

Iran Seeking 250 Millions For 7-Year Modernizing Plan

London, Sept. 25 (U.P.).—Agents of the Iranian government are seeking an international loan to finance at least half of a seven-year, 500-million-dollar public works program designed to strengthen the Tehran regime against Soviet pressure, informed sources said today.

Iranian representatives tentatively have established the amount needed in dollars from foreign sources at 250 million dollars to obtain equipment, engineers and skilled workers from abroad.

An informant said this program was discussed during the recent London meeting of the board of governors of the International Bank for Reconstruction. It was predicted that the bank "will probably favor a loan, though not necessarily 250 million dollars."

These sources pointed out that the discussions gained a sense of political urgency from Russia's renewed pressure on Tehran for quick ratification of an agreement granting the Soviets an oil concession in Azerbaijan.

Details of the reconstruction program were drawn up by an American engineering firm retained by the Tehran government. The Americans listed 200 projects which they said would modernize Iran thoroughly at a cost of $1,300,000,000. The Iranian government cut down the original number of projects to a program costing 500 million dollars.

Iranian sources said the report calculates that Iran could pay half the cost of the program without outside aid. The country's great natural resources and gold reserves—about 150 million dollars—were cited as making Iran a "good banking risk."

Groom

All directors and officers were reelected at the annual meetings of stockholders and board.

President Groom, summarizing the bank's progress, pointed out that deposits had risen from $44,324 on opening day in 1907 to $13,367,040 on August 31, 1947. Capital funds increased from $28,000 to $1,044,000.

He added that a new site for the North Capitol and H sts. branch had been purchased and that construction for the Brightwood branch would begin soon. Stockholders authorized a pension plan for the operating staff, he said.

Officers are Mr. Groom, president; Joseph Sanders, vice president; Francis E. Robey, vice president; Thomas J. Norris, cashier; John Monk, assistant vice president; Ernest R. Wilson, comptroller; William T. Bobb, George H. Polo, Eugene Elgin, Frederick C. Loops, Robert M. Lyon and William W. Stiver, jr., assistant cashiers; Robert E. Kendrick, jr., auditor.

REFINANCING: Rosslyn Gas Co. of nearby Arlington and Alexandria, under a refinancing plan approved yesterday by Virginia Corporation Commission, will issue 125,000 shares of new $50 par common stock to Washington Gas Light Co., its parent. The new issue will be in exchange for 10,000 shares of Rosslyn's present $100 par common stock and also in cancellation of a debt of $1,135,424 advanced by Washington Gas for construction purposes. The new Rosslyn issue also will cover $364,576 capital surplus, representing capital heretofore contributed to the company by its parent.

QUOTABLE QUOTES: "There is a lesson for America in this hour of world suffering and tribulation. For nearly 14 years, some of our people have been looking for handouts from the Government. The only reason the United States has been able to survive is because the Government has been spending that which 158 years of American ingenuity, thrift and hard work has created by the normal functioning of the system of free enterprise," said John A. Reilly at luncheon yesterday of Junior Board of Commerce in Burlington Hotel. Reilly is president of Board of Trade and Second National Bank.

The Federal Diary

Sick Leave Abuse Hit In Quiz on Changes

Agency Officials, Employes State Views on Capitol Hill Inquiry

By Jerry Kluttz

These are among the reactions of Federal officials and employes to the congressional inquiry on sick and annual leave benefits:

Kluttz

1. That the Administration should attempt to work out a "deal" with Congress along this line—to reduce annual leave from 26 to 20 days a year in return for a cost-of-living wage boost for Federal workers;

2. A crackdown on employes who abuse the sick leave privilege. In fact, it's already under way in some agencies and it will spread to others;

3. That sick leave be abolished as such and that each employe be given a flat amount of leave each year which he would be able to use for any purpose. Such a change, it's believed, would sharply reduce leave for sickness, and finally,

4. That the present system of 26 days annual leave and 15 days sick leave be defended.

The leave investigation is being conducted by the Senate Appropriations Committee. It was inspired, it is reported, by Senator Ball of Minnesota, a member of that committee. Ball is said to have expressed a desire to see sick leave abolished, and that each Government worker be given from 30 to 40 days a year which he would be able to use for any purpose.

The entire leave problem is scheduled to be debated next year by the Congress. Pending in both the Senate and House Civil Service committees is a bill that would extend the leave benefits of postal employes to 26 days annual and 15 days sick. The postal groups are now given only 15 days annual and 10 days sick. They are the only Government people who don't get the 26 and 15-day leave benefits.

There is considerable sentiment in Congress to give postal employes additional leave benefits—provided leave is reduced for all other employes. The issue will reach a showdown when the postal bills are taken to the House and Senate floors for debate.

It isn't generally known, but the Administration considered a plan two years ago when the Federal service was placed on a 5-day week to reduce annual leave from 26 to 20 days. The shorter work-week had the effect of giving Federal employes additional leave. The 26 days formerly amounted to a month under the six-day schedule. But it's five weeks and a day under the five-day week, a liberal amount.

Now the voluntary reduction plan has been revived—provided it's coupled with a request to Congress to raise salaries. Advocates of this plan say the average Federal worker would welcome less annual leave and more money. They are sure something along this line can be worked out.

The sick leave abusers, however, are the real worry of Federal officials and their honest and sincere coworkers. They're making trouble for everyone, and this small minority will have themselves to blame if sick leave is abolished.

The average Federal worker takes only seven days of sick leave a year. Hundreds of conscientious employes haven't taken an hour of sick leave in 10, 20, and 30 years. But I examined the sick leave record of a group of production employes this week in a big Federal agency and to say I was shocked is to put it mildly.

These 6000 employes took an average last year of more than 15 days. After every big payday upward of 300 called in "sick." Only a minor number was "sick" on paydays. The official frankly admitted his employes were "cheating." His repeated warnings had been ignored.

Those who insist that no change should be made in the present leave system point out that the Federal employe now works 40 hours a week in comparison with 39 before the war. That the employe is docked for annual leave for being a few minutes late to work and for a variety of other reasons which would be excused in private employment.

FSA: Maurice Collins, assistant administrator of Federal Security, plans to retire soon after 35 years in the Government. He's a career man of the highest type. He may not know it now, but Administrator Oscar Ewing, who has a flair for politics, will discover Collins can't be easily replaced.

PEOPLE: Interior has assigned Sumner P. Wing, a Reclamation engineer, to help foreign countries on their irrigation problems . . . Mrs. Rose Marshall has been awarded $75 for a suggestion that would save Uncle Sam $15,000 a year. She's an employe in the personnel branch of the National Guard Bureau.

RFC: About 200 employes of Reconstruction Finance have been excused for several hours over the past couple of days because of the "cold wave." They work in the building now being constructed at Connecticut ave. and H st. nw. The building has no heat and it won't have for another month. Many employes there have become ill from the damp, cold and dirt.

AIR FORCES is pleading for recruits. But at Bolling Field AF is assigning needed military men to the work of janitors, plumbers, etc. The civilians in these jobs are being fired.

Split Shifts in Va. School Give Mother Cooking Problem

The Washington Post

HOME FROM THE "LATE SHIFT"—Mrs. Norman Hollis stands in the doorway of her Falls Church home with her daughter, Sybil, 7, to welcome Robert, 6, home from afternoon classes of the first grade. Sybil is on the early shift, attends the second grade from 9 a. m. 'till noon.

Problems caused by overcrowding in Falls Church elementary schools don't end at the school door.

To the Norman Hollis family, who live in a new home on Route 1 in West Falls Church, overcrowded schools pose a domestic as well as an educational problem.

Mrs. Enza Hollis is the mother of a first grade boy who attends school afternoons, and a second grade daughter who gets her education in the morning.

Their school, the Madison Elementary, must operate those two grades on a half-day, staggered schedule because it hasn't room for its 675 students at one time.

Crowded school conditions, and particularly the half-day sessions in first and second grades, were strongly protested this week by the Falls Church school board, which asked Fairfax officials for action.

Harried school officials, doing their best to meet the problem, are offering relief shortly in the form of four Quonset huts, to be placed next to Madison School. They hope that the structures will absorb some of the student surplus.

But to the Hollis family, school overcrowding is a matter of too many meals, too many buses met, and too little time for routine household chores.

Mrs. Hollis gets her 7-year-old daughter, Sybil, out of bed at 7 a. m., feeds her breakfast, and shoves her off to catch the 8 a. m. school bus several blocks away.

An hour later, son Robert, 6, gets up, has his breakfast, plays in the yard for a bit, eats lunch his mother prepares at 11:15, and catches the 11:30 a. m. school bus.

By 12:45 p. m., Sybil is back and hungry for her lunch, and by 4 p. m., Bobbie returns to complete the roster of the Hollis younger generation. As Mrs. Hollis puts it: "I seem to spend the day fixing breakfasts and cooking lunches."

U. S. to Study Need of Va. Land Deals

Truman Tells Tuck Government Will Check Necessity of Further Acquisitions

Papers filed in Alexandria Federal Court show that President Truman has ordered a study made to determine the necessity of further acquisition of land in Virginia by the Federal Government.

This was made known in a letter from the President to Governor Tuck of Virginia and was included as part of an answer in a Rosslyn land condemnation case.

The file showed that Governor Tuck had written Mr. Truman July 14 that "the acquisition of land in Virginia by the Federal Government has reached such proportions that it is a matter of concern to the Commonwealth of Virginia."

Governor Tuck said that in 1943 Virginia "suggested a procedure under which further acquisition would be made only after joint conferences of Federal and State officials."

"The response to this suggestion was agreeable and encouraging," he said.

Governor Tuck said he had been advised that the War and Navy Departments had established such a policy. But "a conscientious search of the records fails to disclose that either this office or the Virginia Conservation Commission was consulted on recent War Department acquisitions of private property."

The Governor said the land purchase problem with resultant loss of tax revenue was especially acute in Arlington, Fairfax, Stafford, Caroline, York, Warwick, Norfolk and Princess Anne Counties.

Copies of the letters were filed as part of an answer by John E. Fowler of Washington to a Government condemnation against 3 acres of his property in Rosslyn, Va. The Government has stated the land is need by the Central Intelligence Group. Judge Sterling Hutcheson ordered the entire answer stricken from the records after Government attorneys protested that the letters were irrelevant to the Fowler case.

Sunny, Cool Day Promised For D. C. Area

Washington, which received no more than a drenching as the result of a tropical storm which passed far to the east yesterday, was promised mostly sunny and cool weather today.

The Weather Bureau said today will see the highest temperature somewhere in the low 60s. There will be moderate northernly winds.

Yesterday's high was 69 at 4:36 p. m. and the low was 50 at 7:04 a. m.

Storm Bypasses District

The tropical storm which bypassed Washington as it worked its way up the Atlantic Coast diminished rapidly in strength after bringing record-breaking rains to Greensboro, N. C., Wednesday.

Late yesterday the Weather Bureau replaced its storm warnings with small craft warnings from Cape Ann to the Virginia Capes and on Chesapeake and Delaware Bays.

Meanwhile, Greensboro took strong measures yesterday to combat a critical water shortage caused by Wednesday's storm. City engineers said there was only about a four-day supply on hand.

Dam Washed Out

Flood waters, resulting from a 7.54-inch rainfall, washed out 150 feet of the earthen-work dam at Lake Brandt, source of the city's water supply.

A pumping station, capable of augumenting the regular supply, was put out of commission when the raging torrents swept it full of debris.

Engineers said this station could be put back into operation as soon as it could be cleaned out, but that repairs on the Lake Brandt dam would have to wait until the flood waters recede.

The storm also brought the heaviest rainfall in years to the Virginia coast before heading out to sea.

Found a Revolver?

Police Corpl. Charles B. Kimbell reported yesterday that while on duty in the Ninth Precinct during the night he lost his revolver. The finder is requested to return Kimbell's Colt Official Police Revolver, .38-caliber and its holster immediately.

Alien Held In $50,000 Trunk Theft

FBI Contends Arrest May Have Broken Up Baggage Stealing Ring

FBI agents yesterday arrested a 52-year-old alien here in thfet of a $50,000 trunk and expressed belief they had broken up a Midwest baggage-stealing ring.

Platis

The trunk, owned by a wealthy Fort Wayne, Ind., couple, contained bonds, securities, Government checks valued at more than $20,000 and easily usable check books on accounts totaling more than $28,000.

Agents who had been waiting for a claimant to pick up the trunk at Union Station, nabbed Samuel C. Platis of East Chicago, Ind. They said he called for the trunk in the name of John Miller. He was held on $7500 bond for further hearing October 2.

The FBI said the trunk was shipped from Wilwaukee, Wis., to Fort Wayne by Mr. and Mrs. Herman F. Frieburger. On its arrival there, the Frieburgers were notified, but when they called for the trunk, it could not be found. Investigation disclosed it had been reshipped to Washington, addressed to George Miller, and sent by John Miller.

Agents said shipping tags had been changed after the trunk arrived in Fort Wayne and Miller had asked its reshipment to Washington. They said he record shows 13 arrests on false pretenses and swindling charges since 1921.

In Custody Case

Misconduct Is Denied by Boy's Mother

Mrs. Edith Bessie Dye, 24-year-old former Wac fighting a legal battle to regain custody of her 6-year-old son from her parents, yesterday denied from the witness stand that she had once spent a night in a parked car with a male friend.

The vehement denial was made under cross-examination by John Conroy, attorney for the child's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Clyde King, 308 Seaton pl. ne.

Conroy's line of questioning, believed aimed at attempting to show that Mrs. Dye would not be fit to care for the youngster, concerned Mrs. Dye's association with a man with whom she said she had driven from Pennsylvania to Washington and then to Baltimore.

She said she stayed by herself in Baltimore and that she "believed" the man drove on back to Pennsylvania.

In response to other questions, the witness denied ever having thrown the boy to the floor or having burned him with cigarettes.

The boy himself told reporters he would prefer to stay "with gramma and granpa."

Mrs. Dye placed the child with her mother and stepfather when he was a year old, after separating from her husband. She went to work in Baltimore and, in 1943, joined the Wacs.

After Mrs. Dye's testimony, the case was recessed until Monday.

Woman Burned By Explosion Of Gas Furnace

Mrs. Libbie S. Alexander, 67, 1424 Varnum st. nw., was badly burned yesterday when a gas furnace at her home exploded as she opened the furnace door.

At Casualty Hospital, she was reported suffering first- and second-degree burns about the face, right ear and right side of the neck. Her condition was reported as "good."

The explosion occurred at 10:19 a. m. in the basement of her two-story brick home. A daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth Larson, and two grandchildren were in the house at the time.

Firemen said the interior of the furnace was damaged but no damage resulted to the house. Mrs. Alexander had gone to the basement, the daughter said, to see why the furnace was not heating the house.

Plan Sought To Hospitalize D. C. Prisoners

Judge Neilson Asks Officials to Confer After Post Report

By Alfred E. Lewis
Post Reporter

Municipal Court Judge George D. Neilson will seek a conference with District and jail officials to see if a system can be worked out for the hospitalization of prisoners.

The judge made this announcement as an aftermath of a story revealed by The Washington Post in which a complainant in a case was purposely held as a witness and ordered hospitalized but instead was kept in jail.

Under the District law, judges have no right to commit prisoners to the hospital for treatment. Judge Neilson said he would ask District Commissioned Guy Mason, who has supervision over health and welfare; Donald Clemmer, director of the Department of Corrections, and Col. Curtis Reid, superintendent of the jail, to the conference.

Remedy Needed

"Something has to be done to rectify this situation" the judge said. "I want to see if we can avoid repetition of these incidents, some of which may be fatal, as in the Scott case."

The judge was referring to Charles W. Scott, 24, who died in the District Jail November 2. Neilson ordered Scott hospitalized but instead he was taken to the jail.

Referring to the present case of Mrs. Mary E. Murrill, 32, 412 6th st. nw., who was ordered sent to Gallinger for hospitalization, but instead was kept in jail, the judge said he would like to know:

1. Why Mrs. Murrill was released from the original hospital in which she was confined to appear in court in the condition in which she did? (Her left cheek was split with a three-inch gash requiring 10 stitches, her jaw was fractured, there was another one-inch gash over her left eye and she was so weak she had to be assisted to the stand.)

2. Why the District Attorney presented the case when she was in that condition?

3. Why she was not hospitalized as ordered instead of being kept in jail?

No Jurisdiction

Spokesman at Casualty Hospital where Mrs. Murrill was originally confined said that they had no jurisdiction to keep a patient against their will and that Mrs. Murrill had insisted on being released.

Assistant District Attorney Sidney Sachs said that he presented the case because Mrs. Murrill insisted on prosecuting the case immediately. Mrs. Murrill was beaten by her husband, who was later sentenced to six months in jail.

Colonel Reid reported that Mrs. Murrill was immediately taken to the jail infirmary where she was examined by their regular physician, Dr. Martin L. Cannon. He said the prisoner was given adequate treatment there, and did not require transfer to Gallinger Hospital as ordered by Judge Neilson.

Judge Neilson said that his recommendation "was not idle talk and neither is that of any other judge. I feel that doctors at the jail should give any judge's recommendation great weight."

Water Main Needs in D. C. Trimmed by Housing Lag

$100,000 Less Will Be Required in 1949, Supt. Auld Says In Fund Estimate

By James E. Ficken
Post Reporter

The District will need $100,000 less for new water mains in fiscal 1949 because postwar housing construction is only about half as much as originally expected.

This was revealed by Water Superintendent David Auld in his $6,772,000 budget estimate for the fiscal year beginning next July 1, released by the Commissioners yesterday.

Auld said he had figured his 1948 budget on the basis of experts' estimates that 8000 new housing units would be built in the city. Only about 4000 units were actually constructed.

Materials purchased with 1948 funds can therefore be used for an equal number of installations expected next year, he explained.

Still $800,000 Higher

Auld's 1949 budget request of $6,772,000 was more than $800,000 higher than funds received this year, despite the saving of water main money. Nearly half of the big budget would go into capital improvements.

The District should install a $280,000 water main recommended by the Board of Fire Underwriters to provide adequate water for fire protection on Capitol Hill, Auld said.

Congested Locality

The big new Capitol Hill main would extend from 11th and M sts. nw. to 4th and L sts. ne. It would provide added water supplies for the "congested locality" which includes the United States Capitol, the Supreme Court Building and other Government buildings on the "Hill."

These other capital improvements were proposed:

1. Funds totaling $1,120,000 for remodeling Georgetown Reservoir.

2. A $105,00 outlay for replacing and improving the water system at McMillan filter plant.

3. Installation of a $52,000 new "feeder" water main system to serve the fast-growing Anacostia area.

4. A sum of $600,000 to pay the 1949 portion of a two-million-dollar improvement project at the Bryant st. pumping station. The three-year project was authorized in the 1948 budget.

Funds for new hydrants were cut $15,000 to $55,000 because the department has completed much of its war-deferred work.

Operating expenses would provide an additional $52,120 for hiring new unclassified employes, including an alum plant operator, a senior painter and a junior filter plant operator at Washington Aqueduct.

Auld also requested $104,000 worth of new equipment and replacements for worn-out items. New equipment would include two-way radios for emergency vehicles ($3000), a trailer-mounted air compressor ($3000), and uniforms for meter readers ($2000).

Replacements for 28 trucks and autos would require $48,000, Auld estimated.

Rent Boosts Requested in Three Projects

The District Rent Control Administration yesterday was asked by owners to grant rent increases for 372 units in two District apartment houses and one housing development.

The Kenesaw Apartment House Co. asked average 15 per cent increases for 74 apartments at the Kenesaw, 3080 16th st. nw., William Mansfield, Rent Control secretary-docket clerk reported. Present rents range from $25 to $112 per month, he said.

Examiner William H. Clarke will hear the case October 24, Mansfield announced.

Walker & Dunlop, Inc., owners of 187 housing development units in the 4800 block of East Capitol st., sought a straight $5-a-month boost for each apartment, he revealed. Present rents range from $57.50 to $62.50, he said.

Examiner Dennis H. Lane will consider the case at an October 29 hearing, Mansfield revealed.

Owners cited higher taxes, mounting operating costs and expenditures for capital improvements as reasons why rent boosts were necessary, he said.

Frank D. Phillips, owner, also petitioned for higher rents for 111 units at the Pall Mall Apartments, 1112 16th st. nw. Mansfield said his office would have to study the petition to determine the average increase requested.

Voters Encouraged

To facilitate parking for new voters who will register in the Bethesda court building between October 13 and the November 1 deadline for new voters, the county commissioners have ruled that no one except persons registering may park on Montgomery ave. and Wisconsin ave. within one block of the county building during the three-week period. Registration hours will be from 12 to 5 p. m. and 6 to 9 p. m.

Used Car Row

$25,000 Suit Filed Against Auto Dealer

A Washington used-car dealer yesterday was sued for $25,000 for false arrest in a dispute over the condition of an automobile he sold.

Vollmer H. Campbell of 50 Massachusetts ave. nw., the dealer, was named in an action filed in District Court by Attorney W. T. Jones for Edward W. Martin, 54, of 631 Pennsylvania ave. nw.

Martin, an importer and exporter, charged his arrest on a warrant sworn out by Campbell on larceny by trick charges, damaged his business and his reputation.

Jones said Martin purchased a 1942 Plymouth from Campbell for $1000 on a guarantee the car was in good condition. It was rejected at the city inspection station for mechanical faults and returned to Campbell.

Campbell returned the car to Martin the following day for shipment to South America. On arrival there, the suit charges, the car needed $500 repair work, the attorney said. Martin refused to pay the purchase price and Campbell filed a civil action and later swore out a warrant for Martin's arrest. The larceny charge was noll-prossed.

Great-Grandmother, 64, Didn't Enjoy Patrol Wagon Ride

Can an unescorted, 64-year-old great-grandmother with a speech difficulty take care of herself on 13th and H sts. ne. about 11 p. m. of a Saturday night?

Mrs. Elva Davis of 2408 30th st. ne., a native Washingtonian and widow of a Spanish-American War veteran thought so, especially since all she was doing was waiting for a bus.

Two Ninth Precinct police pricates thought not—"that neighborhood is no place for a 64-year-old lady to be that late on a Saturday night"—and sent her to the station in a patrol wagon, from which she was dispatched home in a cab, 95-cent fare collect.

Mrs. Davis found the experience "humiliating" and friends say it aggravated the nervous condition to which she is prone.

Capt. John B. Jeffries of the Ninth Precinct, said yesterday, "I may command the officers for sending the old lady into the precinct when they found her."

The two officers are Pvts. Walter Shepherd and Henry J. Peterson.

Mrs. Davis, who has learned to fend for herself, as widows must, since her husband died nearly 40 years ago, despite her speech difficulty, and that she suffers from arthritis thinks nothing of going shopping in the neighborhood of her home, where she lives with a daughter, or going to the movies.

Last Saturday night she had gone to the Princess Theater, 1119 H st. ne., and started walking to her usual bus stop at 13th and H sts. when she was accosted by two policemen who grabbed her by the arm and asked her where she was going.

"What do you want with me?" I haven't done anything," she says she told them, and showed her dime for bus fare.

They insisted on putting her into the patrol wagon, however, she says, and taking her to the station.

Adding to her embarrassment was the fact that her bus drew up just then and friends aboard it saw her being put into the wagon.

At the station she found herself so nervous that she couldn't make herself understood. It was not until pencil and paper were produced and she wrote her name and address, and police verified it and the fact that her cab fare would be paid, that they sent her home.

Captain Jeffries, who said he made an investigation of the incident, said Mrs. Davis "was not in the station more than 15 minutes and was not treated discourteously. As she left she expressed by her actions her appreciation."

Use of the patrol wagon was explained on the grounds that scout cars are not easy to obtain at that hour.

Pvt. Shepherd wouldn't talk when asked about it, but Pvt. Peterson said the "lady seemed to be very nervous and I thought she couldn't take care of herself."

Mrs. Davis is not entirely in agreement with the police.

Danville, Va., Sept. 25 (AP).—Isaac Berkeley Patterson, 37, is under court order not to again molest or annoy Ruby Townsend, whom he had been charged with threatening over the telephone towards the last of a three-year period that the attractive young woman claims she had received phone calls from an unknown admirer.

He also was given a suspended 12-month sentence on a warrant charging that he threatened the girl's niece, Linda Gayle Townsend, also over the telephone.

Patterson was arrested in a public phone booth Monday while talking with Miss Townsend. She charged that the man represented himself during the calls as "Ike Perkinson" an admirer, and that towards the last he threatened her life ostensibly because she received visits from others.

Jobless Rolls Rising Among D. C. Teachers

Increasing unemployment among teachers in the District was reported yesterday by the United States Employment Service here.

The change in the teachers supply picture was attributed by USES Director Fred Z. Hetzell to a combination of Federal layoffs and increased pay scales in the teaching profession, just effective. The latter, he said, drew many from other fields, either because the pay no longer was better than teachers' salaries or because the jobs were less secure.

About 250 teachers are now available with grammar school, high school and college experience, Hetzell said, while "job openings in this field have fallen off considerably."

Many of those listed as high school and grammar school teachers, he pointed out, "do not meet the requirements established for the local public schools."

A spokesman for the superintendent of schools' office said there are few actual vacancies in the public schools now but hundreds are still holding "temporary" positions.

Although teachers were said to constitute the "most numerous" job seekers among professional personnel, Hetzel pointed out that the current supply of lawyers seeking local employment is also "unusual."

Hetzel listed 60 job hunters in the legal field, many of them former Government workers.

On the over-all work front, the USES chief revealed that employment declined slightly to about 24,000 during September, chiefly due to the back-to-school movement of hundreds. Jobs listed with the USES increased to 2409 from 1398.

'Servitude' Suit Is Filed For $25,000

A man who asserted he was held "in voluntary servitude" and obleged to work for 50 cents a day while sleeping in a stable with horses, yesterday filed suit against his alleged employer for $25,000.

The plaintiff, James McQueen, who listed his address as the Salvation Army, asserted in the suit he went to work as a stable boy for Francis J. Hannan, trading as Edgewater Riding Academy last June 10.

McQueen asserted he was to be paid $25 a week, but that Hannan "with knowledge of his (McQueen's) inability to gain profitable employment immediately" reneged on the agreement.

"With Express Intent"

The suit charged Hannan forced McQueen to work from June until September 1, "with the express intent of subjecting the plaintiff to servitude without compensation."

No physical restraint or force was used on the plaintiff, the suit admitted.

The suit quoted Hannan as telling the plaintiff that he wasn't worth 50 cents and that he was "only allowed to work out of the kindness of my heart."

McQueen charged Hannan with taking advantage of his ill "destitute" condition in the suit filed by his attorneys, James Mcoggs and Lewis E. Barnes.

Denies Hiring Him

Hannan had a different story to tell reporters "I never hired the He is a helpless cripple. He ap- "McQueen came here exhausted. man for anything," he said. plied for a job as a coach man. I could see he was unable to work but is was a very hot day and I felt sorry for him. He said he was hungry and I got him something to eat. He had no place to go and I allowed him to sleep in the stable. I gave him breakfast and lunch and at night I'd give him 50 cents for dinner. When he left, I went after him and stipped him $5 because I felt sorry for him. He could not even take a horse to water."

Groups Fight Liquor Store Applications

Hearings to air protests against two proposed retail liquor licenses were held yesterday before the Alcohol Beverage Control Board.

The contests concerned the grocery store of Lawence Scheiter, 1500 Ogden st. nw., and the transfer of a license from the Belmont Liquor Store, at 2406 14th st. nw., to Seymour Wilen, trading as Deane Liquors, at 1013 Kenilworth ave. ne.

Citizens from the Ogden st. area argued that should Scheiter get the off-sale license to sell beer and light wine which he seeks, the neighborhood will deteriorate. It was said that the neighborhood was unsuitable for a store selling these beverages because nearby are at least three churches, a sanitarium and the Martha Washington Seminary.

The case was taken under advisement by the ABC board.

Nathan Lubar, attorney for Deane Liquors, said that the area, although in a commercial zone, contains no stores with licenses to sell liquors off-sale.

Citizens of the area said that a liquor store might introduce a bad element into the neighborhood. It was alleged that children in the area have been molested and the fear was voiced that a liquor store might result in more incidents of this kind.

Contesting the Deane Liquors license are the Eastland Gardens Citizens Association, the Deanewood Civic Association, and two liquor store operators, all represented by Attorney Robert E. Lynch. Also challenging the license transfer is the Mayfair Mansions, a large apartment development which plans to have a complete shopping center. Representing Mayfair is Warren E. Magee.

The Deane hearing was continued until 10 a. m. today.

Morgenthau Writes He Wanted to Resign After Roosevelt Announced Spending Policy

Henry Morgenthau, jr., said yesterday he told President Roosevelt in April, 1938, he was "seriously thinking of resigning" as Treasury Secretary after the President had approved a program of heavy spending to combat the depression of the 1937-38 winter.

Writing in Collier's magazine in the second of a series of six articles based on his diaries, Morgenthau said, "I was profoundly shaken" after learning of the new program from James Roosevelt, the President's son; Harry Hopkins, and others.

"My hopes for a balanced budget were dead," he wrote. "I felt that we were committed as a Nation to an unsound policy."

However, the former Cabinet officer said Roosevelt talked him out of quitting, telling him "you have done a magnificent job" and accusing him of pique because the Treasury was not consulted.

Morgenthau

"The President then became excited and said if I resigned now it would mean the destruction of the Democratic Party, creation of a third party and the loss of the Administration program in Congress and that I would go down in history as having quit under fire," Morgenthau said.

He wrote that he "spent the next few hours in a gloomy daze of indecision" but finally decided he and the President had differed over an issue "concerning which, it is fair to say, there were, at the very least, two [illegible]."

"It was, moreover," he added, "a technical issue rather than a moral issue; a question of means, not of ends."

Morgenthau also wrote of a January, 1938, luncheon conference he had with the President, after which he noted in his diary it seemed Roosevelt was "going to plan to get back the way (President) Cleveland did."

Roosevelt's Strategy Outlined

Here the former Treasury Secretary said parenthetically "there was an interval of Republican administration between Cleveland's first and second terms."

He quoted the President as saying at the luncheon:

"The next two years really don't count. They are over the dam. I think you and I can get by (and he smiled) with another three billion deficit in '40 and '41. (The fiscal year of 1941 would end his second term.) Then it will be up to whoever succeeds us, which will most likely be either a conservative Democrat or a Republican. The thing for us to be thinking about is what will happen after we are out.

"After we are out, the next administration will most likely begin to economize and slash expenditures and the chances are we will have chaos as a result. We must have a plan. Our successors will not have a plan. After they have failed they will most likely send for us to come back and solve the problem. I don't mean necessarily send for us to return to Washington, but at least call on us for a program."

Morgenthau said he was not certain what the President meant. At the time, he said, he assumed Roosevelt "had no idea of seeking a third term in 1940."

A balance budget seemed within sight, Morgenthau wrote, until the stock market collapse on "Black Tuesday," October 17, 1937. As unemployment increased, Morgenthau said the group which he described as "the spenders" argued strongly for a new pump-priming program. In this group, he said, were Hopkins, James Roosevelt, Leon Henderson, Ben Cohen, Lauchlin Currie, Harold Ickes and Aubrey Williams.

The former Treasury Secretary said he was supported by John Garner, Cordell Hull, James Farley and Henry Wallace in asking for reassurance to business.

Morgenthau described several conversations he had with the President on the subject. Once, he wrote, Roosevelt said he had been told "business was deliberately causing the depression in order to hold a pistol at his head and force a retreat from the New Deal."

Despite these disagreements, Morgenthau wrote he and the President "were in total agreement on all other broad questions. We shared the same deep conviction that the first concern of government would be the masses of the people."

200,000 Pray As Eucharist Congress Ends

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 25 (AP).—A throng of 200,000 Catholics today knelt on the green meadows of Delaware Park and bowed their heads as Francis Cardinal Spellman, Archbishop of New York, raised a golden monstrance bearing the consecrated host (communion wafer) in the benediction that signified the end of the Centennial Eucharistic Congress.

The crowd, which Police Commissioner Thomas J. McMahon said was "at least 200,000," was the largest in this city's history.

Flanked by the bands of various religious organizations in multi-colored uniforms, the mighty gathering lifted its voice in hymns and prayers to celebrate the diocese's 100th year and to reaffirm their belief in the presence of Jesus Christ in the holy eucharist (communion).

Today's benediction closed out four days of mass worship and Catholic splendor unrivaled since the last congress in Minneapolis-St. Paul in 1941.

At the day's only other event, a pontifical high mass for women attended by over 20,000 in Memorial Auditorium, the Most Rev. Alexandre Vachon, Archbishop of Ottawa, Ontario, declared that "the powers of evil are ever endeavoring to demolish the sanctity of the family."

Criticizing the recently adopted divorce law in Italy, Archbishop Vachon said the law was an effort by the Communist Party to loosen the family ties, knowing that they would have no difficulty afterward "in corrupting the whole of society."

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 25.—This Navy-California game that's coming up Saturday has a fascination all its own for Tom Hamilton, Navy's Head Coach. He's too polite to say so, but it is known that Hamilton and other Navy people would like to crock California good and not alone for the satisfaction of winning a football game.

POVICH

The off-stage figure on Saturday will be Frank Wickhorst, who was fired as California's head coach at the end of last season. Wickhorst is an Annapolis graduate, classmate and teammate of Hamilton at Navy. He captained the great Navy team of 1926 when Hamilton's drop kicking tied the Army, 21-21 at Chicago, in the greatest of all service games.

Down through the years, Wickhorst and Hamilton have been buddies. Hamilton hasn't said that California gave Wickhorst a raw deal last year, but he was far from amused by what happened to his good friend. And when Navy contracted to play on the Pacific Coast for the first time in 23 years, California was selected as the opponent on the assumption that an old Navy man would be coaching out here.

Now it's Lynn Waldorf, from Northwestern, who is coaching California, the school's fourth head coach in four years. Wickhorst virtually got his notice while on the way East to scout last season's Army-Navy game in the belief he'd be sending a California team against Navy this Saturday. At Chicago, a telegram was delivered to him. The California student body was suggesting that Wickhorst resign.

IT WASN'T a very hot season Wickhorst had in his one year as head coach of California. Tis team won only two games and lost seven. The students weren't happy, the football playeds were sore at him, and the upshot was that they bought up the last year of his two-year contract. That sort of thing can happen easily at the University of California where the students can throw considerable weight around. Cal boasts of campus democracy in perhaps its purest form.

There's no cry at the University of California to give the game back to the boys. The students have run the game for years. They virtually hire and fire the coaches, through the ASUC—the Associated Students of University of California. They handle the gate receipts, make the disbursements, authorize coaching contracts, plot the schedules, and hire the personnel with little regard for the faculty, trustees or university president.

The students were unhappy last season when California was knocked off by Wisconsin, Oregon, UCLA, Washington, Southern California, Oregon State and Stanford. But it was the football players who initiated the revolt against Wickhorst. They said they didn't think he was such a hot coach. One of the squad's quarterbacks was E. Welch, then president of the student body, a very potent person in the school's football and politics.

SOME OF THE PLAYERS grumbled that Wickhorst forgot they were civilian, and barked orders as if he still were a Navy commander, with three fat stripes. Most of his men were fresh out of the service themselves and weary of that type of command. Anyway, the situation built up to a fine mess and the players took their squawks to the student body, and won. It doesn't happen that way in the Eastern schools, but at California it can easily.

While they were about it, the students maneuvered a realignment of almost the whole athletic set-up. The graduate manager wnt out, and student body president Welch didn't have to go job-hunting on graduation. He ended up as the graduate manager. While they were about it, they hired a new director of athletics, Brutus Hamilton.

With California coachless last winter, the associated students went out for a big time coach. They authorized Hamilton to tour the United States and select the five finest coaches he could interest to come to Berkeley for interviews. Michigan's successful coach, Fritz Crisler, was the first. He was offered the job, said he would consider it, went back to Michigan and announced he would stay with the Wolverines. The suspicion is he got a nice pay hike out of California's offer.

WALDORF WA HIGH on the list, and he took the job. In Waldorf, California got a former thology student from Syracuse who was a star tackle at that school and abandoned his ambitions for the clergy to take over as head coach at Oklahoma City University. Later at Oklahoma A. and M., his teams won four Missouri Valley titles in five years. Then he did well at Kansas State College. Northwestern grabbed him off and for 12 years he was one of the top coaches in the Big Ten.

California hasn't been in the Rose Bowl in 10 years. They haven't won an intersectional game in the same period. They're looking to Waldorf to restore the Bears to a high place in the football sun. They've given him a long-term contract at a lot of dought.

At California, there are two avenues of success for a football coach (1) turning out winning teams, and (2) staying friends with the students. Perhaps that last is the best guarantee.

Navy Finds It's Favored In Opener

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

San Francisco, Calif., Sept. 25.—Four big Navy transports came whooshing out of the northern skies late today and 60 midshipmen deplaned to discover they were favorites to beat University of California on Saturday at Berkeley.

It was a startling piece of news to the Annapolis squad which for four weeks had labored at their Whidbey Island training base on the aerial highway to Alaska under the impression they were in an underdog role. But San Francisco odds makers rate Navy the favorite at 6 to 5.

Tonight perhaps it was a lonely band of midshipmen quartered almost in sight of the California Stadium, but tomorrow they'll be among friends in these parts. In the morning the fleet gets in, 53 ships of the first task force, with 23,000 sailors hitting town, by wonderful coincidence. Big Navy braid will be at the ball game in San Francisco's biggest gold rush since 1849. Navy will have a 6,000-seat rooting section.

California Reserves Strong

Navy men are looking to Tom Hamilton's first team to launch the Middies' season with a victory against the reserve-rich Californians of Lynn Waldorf who slapped down Santa Clara last week, 33 to 7. Beyond their first team, the Middies have not been impressive, even in practice.

But Navy is rearin'. Hamilton and his aides have withheld Quarterback Reaves Baysinger and Halfback Pete Williams from recent scrimmages against the risk of injuries, and it's in the first-string backfield that the Navy hopes for the winning edge.

The veteran line of the Midshipmen, featuring the two good tackles, Dick Shimshak and E. Newbold Smith, and the clever Art Markel at end, will be outweighed more than 12 pounds to the man by the Bears. Navy coaches are hoping for continued cool weather that might nullify a great need for substitutions.

On Navy's starting team will be eight of the regulars who started against Army last November and had Davis, Blanchard & Co., hanging on the ropes near the finish while losing a 21-18 contest. The newscomers to the Navy starting lineup are Fullback Bill Hawkins, Tackle Ken Shiweck and End Phil Ryan.

Pass Defense Shaky

What bothers Hamilton chiefly, besides his lack of competent reserves, is the team's pass defense, as exposed in a recent scrimmage against the University of Washington.

Baysinger and Williams, two of his best defense men, did not figure in that skirmish, however. It's Young Baysinger, the ice-cold kid from Syracuse who bolted off the fourth team in midseason of 1946 to revitalize the Navy attack, who carries most of the Middies' hope.

Navy concedes nothing to California in its first-string backfield. With Baysinger running the T-formation and throwing passes, Hawkins the heavy duty man, and Al McCully and Williams running both inside and outside Navy's offense stacks up formidably.

Ends Will Be Tested

It's the Navy ends who are expected to catch it heavily against Cal. Hamilton's scouts reported that against Santa Clara the Bears were most effective with their sweep attack, featuring George Fong, Jackie Jensen and Jack Swaner.

Like Navy, Coach Waldorf has a T-formation team, but it's the orthodox tight T, in contrast with Navy's Faurot-style of the split-T, with the guards, tackles and ends lining up almost a stride apart.

One-Armed Guard Takes On All Comers

G.W. High's Baldigan Wants to Be a Pilot

If they awarded a "G" for guts to the most courageous high school athlete around Washington, Bill Baldigan, reserve guard on the George Washington of Alexandria football team, would win it with ease.

Nineteen-year-old Bill holds his own against his 190-and 200-pound opponents despite the fact that he has only one arm and weighs only 124 pounds.

Bill was born without his right arm from the elbow down and wears neither a hook nor a false arm.

This is his second year of schoolboy football, his last season being spent on the junior varsity team at Washington-Lee High of Arlington.

By this time, his foes have learned not to show him any special favors because he's as likely to break up a play as any of his teammates.

"No, I don't consider my missing arm a handicap at all," says Bill. "While I don't play high school baseball or basketball, I do okay in the corner lot games. And I don't think that a new right arm would help me improve in English, my only weak subject in school."

His ambition is to become a commercial airplane pilot. He's been taking flying lessons for several months, and all that keeps him from getting the necessary solo flying hours to earn his pilot's license is a lack of cash.

His friends are convinced that if he goes about overcoming that little obstacle the way he has conquered the big ones, he'll have his pilot's license very soon.

Durocher Mentioned As Successor

Pittsburgh, Sept. 25 (AP).—President Frank E. McKinney of the Pittsburgh Pirates announced tonight that Billy Herman has resigned as manager of the team.

The announcement was made at a press conference of the Pittsburgh Pirates owners. Herman also was present but did not comment immediately.

Herman's contract calls for him t omanage the Pirates next year. In this connection, McKinney said:

"To Remain With Organization"

"Herman is remaining with our organization. What his future will be we have not decided. We have no immediate plans for a successor."

"Does the fact that Leo Durocher's suspension has been lifted make him eligible as candidate for manager?" McKinney was asked.

"I believe any man who has been convinced and paid the penalty should be given another chance," said the Pirate boss. He declined to amplify his answer.

Herman, who was present at the conference of officials, left immediately after the meeting broke up. His only comment was that he had not made up his mind whether to stay with the Pirate organization in 1948.

He'll Be Paid in Full

Pirate General Manager Roy Hamey said that in event if Herman does not choose to remain with the team, the club will honor his contract which Hamey said calls for "aproximately $25,000."

"We wouldn't duck that," said Hamey.

McKinney, commenting on the Pirates' last-place finish, said: "We have talked to Billy at some length. He is not apologizing and we are not criticizing him, but we felt that some changes should be made. Bill felt, too, it would be to the best interest of all concerned if he resigned. We are not parting company. He is welcome to remain in the organization. We still have the greatest respect for his ability and his managerial strategy."

McKinney said that the Pirates "are extremely grateful" to the Pittsburgh fans who have enabled the club to set a new attendance record of about 1,300,000 for the season. He added:

"We will continue every effort and spend all the money that is necessary to give Pittsburgh a winning baseball club. However, as far as this season is concerned, we will end in the red. We are not i nthis business to make money. All we want to do is give Pittsburgh a winning team and that is what we intend to do."

Suggs Has Close Call To Gain Semis

Detroit, Sept. 25 (AP).—Escaping a major upset by an eyelash, Louise Suggs, 24-year-old golfing ace from Lithia Springs, Ga., kept her role of tournament favorite alive today in the forty-seventh Women's National Amateur Championship.

The trim little shotmaker swept into the semifinals with a dramatic 1-up decision over Mary McMillin, 20-year-old star from Green Bay, Wis.

Miss Suggs' third match play triumph put her into the upper bracket semifinal against Grace Lenczyk, 20-year-old Newington (Conn.) girl, who scored a top-heavy 6-and-5 win over Mrs. Eddie Bush of Detroit.

Another Georgian, Dorothy Kirby, of Atlanta, kept pace with a 3 and 2 verdict over Polly Riley of Fort Worth, Tex., and will tackle Mrs. Estelle Lawson Page, Chapel Hill, N. C., who edged Dot Kielty of Los Angeles, 2 up.

A brilliant 20-foot putt that banged into the back of the cup for an eagle 3, lveeling the match at the seventeenth, couldn't save the day for Miss McMillin, Wisconsin champion for three years' running.

Mary had fallen 1 down at the sixteenth when Miss Suggs laid her two dead stymies on the same green, forcing her to 3-putt and lose, and it appeared the timely eagle would put Miss McMillin on her way to an upset triumph.

But she sliced her tee shot to the edge of a lake on the eighteenth and had to waste a shot getting back to the fairway. Miss Suggs meanwhile knocked a wood second shot within 15 feet of the cup on the 395-yard hole and got down for her par and victory.

Warner Club Bowling League opens its first season at the Columbia Alleys tonight with member clubs from all the local Warner Brothers theaters.

Fesler Tells Ohio 'Wolves,' 'You Won't Get Rid of Me'

Columbus, Ohio, Sept. 25 (AP).—Ohio State's new grid coach, Wesley Fesler, apparently isn't afraid of those big bad wolves.

The wolves in this instance, are the State Capital's downtown coaches and Monday quarterbacks, credited generally with being one of the big reasons the Buckeye school has had five head coaches in the last eight years.

With preparations completed for Saturday's opener with Missouri, the former Buck All-America spoke his piece right out in meeting before some 800 of the boys from Broad and High streets:

"You're going to play hell getting rid of me."

When the gang quit gasping, Fesler went on:

"These boys of mine have promised to outfight every team they meet. We know we are in as good condition as any opponent.

"So if they give everything they've got, and still lose, it's all right with me. But if they go all out, and give everything they have, and you go around griping and moaning—then to hell with you."

Lip Returns Seeking His Pilot's Job

New York, Sept. 25 (AP).—The "old" Leo Durocher, as glib and gabby as in pre-suspension days, arrived in town today to see the World Series—and Branch Rickey. Talking freely of Brooklyn baseball, California golf and Durocher, the former Dodger manager said he hoped to return as Brooklyn skipper in 1948.

Instead of the subdued "no comment" individual who had little to say for the record all spring and summer after Commissioner A. B. Chandler suspended him for the 1947 season April 9, Leo was expansive as he talked with the press in his East Side apartment. He arrived earlier in the day with his wife, Laraine Day, by plane from California and hurried through the drizzling rain to his home.

To See Rickey Soon

Although his announced mission was to see his old Dodger club play the New York Yankees in the series, opening Tuesday, Leo admitted he expected to see Rickey.

"I have no appointment with him but I definitely expect to see him while I am here," Durocher said. "What I said last fall about wanting to manage Brooklyn until the day I die still goes. I would like to and I hope to manage the Dodgers next year. I would pick Brooklyn if you gave me my choice of the 16 major league clubs."

When he was asked if any other club had approached him about the 1948 season, Durocher replied evasively with "I can't answer that." He gave the same reply when he asked if Rickey had been in touch with him recently.

Wearing a blue polo shirt and no necktie, Leo confirmed reports that he has asked Chandler for clarification of his status in baseball. He wanted it understood, however, that he had not "appealed" but has "asked."

Although his mail had not yet caught up with him after his 10-hour flight from Los Angeles, Leo soon learned how the commissioner's office felt about the matter.

Speaking from Cincinnati, Walter Mulbry, secretary of baseball, said Durocher's suspension ended automatically with the conclusion of the World Series and that Chandler had advised Leo that he was free to negotiate for a job for 1948.

His Choice? The Bums, Natch

Technically, Durocher still is on the Brooklyn list or will be when the suspension formally is lifted. It is common procedure in baseball for a man who has been suspended "from" a club's list to be restored "to" the same list. In that case it would not be possible for Durocher to negotiate with any other club without the Dodgers' consent.

Rickey made no comment on the matter, announcing through Secretary Harold Parrot, "there will be nothing from this office today."

Naturally a Dodger fan, Durocher picked the Brooks to beat the Yankees in a close seriese, dominated by pitching.

Colts Begin Interhigh Grid Title Defense

The 1947 interhigh football series opens today with Calvin Coolidge's defending champion Colts playing Eastern's Ramblers at Eastern, and Anacostia's Indians taking on Central's Vikings at Central. Both games begin at 3:30 p. m.

Woodrow Wilson and Western open their season with a 2:30 game tomorrow at Central and Roosevelt and McKinley Tech make their debuts at 315 Monday at Central.

Today's Coolidge-Eastern game should answer a lot of questions about the team with which the Colts will defend their title. Five regulars are back including Halfback Bobby Rohr and Tackle Chuck Ackerman, All-Highs; Center Krys Valanos, Halfback Tex Jones, and Fullback Ralph Scheaffer, who was a guard last year.

The Colts will be slight favorites over the small, but speedy Eastern team, which will attack from the T formation for the first time. Quarterback Sal DiGiorgi, Halfback Leo Kerschbaum and End Johnny Brown are the stars of the Ramblers.

Central, with 16 lettermen back, is reportedly a vastly improved club over the one that finish third last year. With End Hal Sponsler, and Back Jim Johnson, Jimmy Pantos and Ross Keith, the Vikings will be slight favorites over the Indians. Chow Eschaves and Bobby Lohr will lead the Anacostians into action.

Yankees Series Choices at 2-1 In Carroll's Book

Se. Louis, Sept. 25 (AP).—The New York Yankees are 2-to-1 favorites to win the World Series in the book of Betting Commission James J. Carroll. His odds released today show the Yankees at 9 to 20 and the Brooklyn Dodgers at 9 to 5.

That means that a $20 wager will return $9 on the Yankees and a $5 wager on the Dodgers will return the same amount.

For the opening game Carroll lists the Yankees at 11-20 with Allie Reynolds or Frank Shea pitching, and the Dodgesr at 3-2 with Ralph Branca or Vic Lombardia pitching.

Dean to Start Against Chisox

St. Louis, Sept. 26 (AP).—Dizzy Dean, one-time St. Louis Cardinals pitching ace, will start for the St. Louis Browns in Sunday afternoon's final game of the season against the Chicago White Sox, Manager Muddy Ruel of the Browns said today.

Dean, who has been broadcasting baseball play-by-play for the past several years, said the duration of his appearance on the mound "depends entirely on the White Sox batters."

Greiner Leads District Open With 68; Peacock's 69 Is 2d

Otto Greiner, Woodholme County Club of Baltimore professional, shot a 68 to take the lead in the $1500 District Open Golf championship yesterday over the rain-drenched Indian Spring Country Club course.

The final 18 holes of the 36-hole tournament will take place today.

Going out in 35 strokes and taking only 33 to cover the back nine, Greiner's two under par 68 gave him a one stroke lead over Roger Peacock, pro at the new Silgo Park Golf Course.

In third position was Volney Burnett of Indian Spring, the leading amateur scorer, with a 71. Billy Griffin of Prince Georges, another amateur, finished in a triple tie for fourth position with two Baltimore professionals, John Bass and Glen Spencer, with a 72.

Six men came in with 73s, including amateur Spencer Overton, Rolling Road; Mel Shorey, Indian Spring; Charles Bassler, Chevy Chase; Al Tredor, Anacostia; A. F. O'Linger, Winchester, Va., and Hugh McClellan, Edgewood Arsenal.

Cliff Spencer, Elizabeth City, N C., pro who won last year's event, shot a 74 together with four other professionals, Andy Gibson, Baltimore; Dick McHale, Chevy Chase; Max Elbin, Burning Tree and Bill Fling, unattached.

All night rains followed by high winds made the course extremely treacherous, especially for those teeing off early yesterday morning. The late starters in the field of 84 had a definite advantage, although they too had to cope with water on the greens.

Flattened Ball, Missing Captain, All Part Of G. W.-Virginia Game 25 Years Ago

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Twenty-five years have passed since the University of Virginia beat George Washington, 34-0, in the last meeting of the two schools in Charlottesville.

But time hasn't dimmed the memory of that zany game in the mind of a scrub end, who got his chance against the Cavaliers.

That scrub end, Francis Brown, now chief examiner for the Civil Aeronautics Board, was telling the story to G. W.'s Athletic Director Max Farrington just the other day:

"'Twas quite a game. We had a plucky and willing team, but it was lacking in size and ability. We averaged less than 165 pounds, and our star was a 120 pound former Eastern High halfback, Willie Thomas.

"On the other hand, Virginia was having one of its better seasons with a team averaging 200 pounds. Just the week before, the Cavaliers had held mighty Princeton to a 3-0 margin.

"Well, start things off, just before kickoff time, Coach Bill Quigley discovered that our star end and captain, Jim Ptah, wasn't there. Ptah had missed the train out of Washington. So Quigley gave me my first start.

"We won the toss and elected to receive the kickoff. Thomas caught the ball and headed up the sideline where it seemed like 25 Virginia players hit him and buried him.

"When the referee unraveled the players, and helped the dazed Thomas to his feet Willie didn't have the ball. Everybody on the field began a search for the ball. Willie couldn't remember what he had done with it.

"Finally, the ref looked under the grandstand, and there was what was left of the ball, flatter than a pancake. The Virginia players had hit little Willie so hard, that the wind had been knocked out of him and the ball as well. The remains of the ball had squirted under the stands.

The game was resumed with a new ball, and our side did very well until with two minutes before halftime, Virginia got a first down on our 5. Our little line dug in, and held those big boys for four downs, and then took over.

Then came the payoff. Our punter, Homer Pryor, fumbled the pass from center, and Virginia recovered in the end zone for the touchdown.

"Virginia, stocked with fresh reserves, have us a terrific beating in that second half. Little Thomas, who now works for the Federal Trade Commission, had his ankle broken.

"As we walked off the field toward the locker room, we saw a cloud of dust coming up the road. It was Captain Ptah, speeding to the game in his Ford flivver . . . too late.

"Never did find out whether he planned it that way."

Terps Off by Air Today

JIM TATUM and his University of Maryland football team leave by plane at 1 p. m. today for Columbia, S. C., for tomorrow's game with the University of South Carolina that figures to answer a lot of questions concerning the mysterious Terrapins.

Chester Garula, 210-pound right tackle, will be the only freshman to start for Maryland tomorrow but his presence in no way looks to weaken the Terp line since he had to up-root such tried performers as Wilbur Rock and Jim Goodman to gain the nod.

Lining up with Garula in the forward wall will be George Simler and Francis Evans, end; Joe Drach the other tackle, Ed Schwarz and Al Phillips, guard, and Gene Kinney, center.

Werder Predicts Hoya Win

MORE than 3000 cheering students at a pep rally at Georgetown last night heard Hoya Guard Bus Werder predict a Hilltop victory over the Wake Forest Deacons in a game at North Carolina Saturday night.

'Last year," said Werder, "Wake Forest trounced us 19-6, but this year you can bet things will be a lot different."

The Hoya squad will entrain for Wake Forest this afternoon. First home game for the Blue and Gray will be at Griffith Stadium against Fordham on October 3.

Execution Begins Of 'Fever' Horses

Salem, N. H., Sept. 25 (U.P.)—Mass execution of swamp fever stricken thoroughbred race horses at Rockingham Park began today as five of the animals were put to death.

By tomorrow, a track spokesman said, a total of 15 of the ailing horses will have been destroyed with strychnine.

This would leave 18 fever-wracked thoroughbreds still alive, but their owners have refused to permit them to be executed without more compensation than $2000 each.

Assault Splashes Through Workout

A majority of the clockers caught the Texas Terror in 1:41 3/5 although Trainer Max Hirsch, highly gratified by the workout, clocked Assault in slightly more than 1:40 for the muddy mile.

Meanwhile, Armed jogged once around the track with an exercise boy in the saddle. The Golden Gelding will be given a final speed blowout on five-eighths of a mile tomorrow morning.

Mize Slams 51st Homer As N. Y. Wins

Boston, Sept. 25 (AP).—Johnny Mize tied Ralph Kiner of Pittsburgh for the major league home run lead today when he belted his fifty-first four-bagger of the year to lead the New York Giants to a 3-1 victory over the Boston Braves.

Mize also smashed two singles and scored two runs to help rookie right-hander Larry Jansen register his twenty-first victory against five defeats. Jansen doled out only seven hits and lost his shutout in the ninth when the Braves scored their lone run on his own error. It was his sixth win over the Braves, who have yet to beat him.

Johnny Sain was the starter and loser for the Braves, giving up six hits in eight innings. Sain was seeking his twenty-first victory, too, but suffered his twelfth defeat. Mize's homer came off Si Johnson in the ninth.

Bums Are Kings Today

BROOKLYN, Sept. 25 (AP).—They're locking up the shops and offices along Flatbush ave. tomorrow afternoon and giving the town over to the Bums—those Dodgers who won a National League baseball pennant and who confidently take on the Yankees from across the river in the World Series next week.

THERE will be a motorcade in which will ride Brooklyn's most beloved men of the moment—the Dodgers. The team will ride up to the front steps of Borough Hall where there will be speeches and banners and bands playing.

About 100,000 persons are expected to cheer the team as it raises its pennant over Borough Hall.

Browns Win Before 315

St. Louis, Sept. 25 (AP).—The Cleveland Indians, trying for second-place gold in the coming division of World Series spoils, ran into superb five-hit pitching by Righthander Jack Kramer today and dropped a 4-to-3 decision to the St. Louis Browns in their final clash of the season.

The defeat, witnessed by only 315 paying customers, the smallest turnout of the year in St. Louis, cost the Indians a chance to tie the idle third-place Boston Red Sox and left the Tribe two full games back of runner-up Detroit.

W&L Sends Spy Into Opponents' Dressing Room

The Generals have their own version of fifth-column tactics.

Last week, when the W. and L. opponents, the uantico Marines, retired for their half-time intermission confab, a W. and L. "scout" went along with them—undetected.

When Coach Art (Pappy) Lewis, the W. and L. skipper, was chided for employing such tactics, he pleaded ignorance, and asked who the "spy" was.

When told that it was his own son, 4-year-old Johnny, Lewis caught Johnny by the seat of his pants and tried to wring some Quantico secrets out of him. Pappy asked, "What did they say in the huddle, Johnny?"

Johnny's reply:

"They said, 'Go get 'em.'"

Welshman Dai Rees beat fellow Ryder Cup member Jimmy Adams of Scotland, 1 up. Other Ryder Cuppers who survived were Charley Ward, Eric Green and British Open Champion Fred Daly.

Montgomery's Legislators Hit Lane Sales Tax Defense

Members of the Montgomery County delegation in the Maryland Senate and House of Delegates, who unanimously opposed the adoption of the State sales tax, yesterday cited three reasons for their opposition in replying to recent speeches by Gov. William Preston Lane.

In Bethesda, Md., last Friday, Governor Lane had told residents that Montgomery County would receive $1,085,000 in "money you have never had before" from the first year's collections of the sales tax. In an earlier radio talk, he charged "misrepresentation" of the tax by persons or groups with special interests to protect.

The Montgomery County delegation replied yesterday, in a statement issued by senior Senator Roy Tasco Davis, that they will work and vote for the repeal of the tax. In taking this position, they asserted, they are representing not groups with special interests, but "all of the citizens of Montgomery County." They oppose this tax, the statement continued, because:

"1. It works a hardship upon those who are least able to pay.

"2. It seriously affects the economy of counties that border upon the District of Columbia and States that do not impose this tax . . . The so-called 'use tax' law . . . cannot be enforced . . .

"3. The cost of collecting the tax is excessive and the task imposed upon the merchants in collecting, recording and remitting the tax is burdensome and expensive."

Justement Named Architect for U. S. Court House

Louis Justement, Washington architect, will design the District's new Federal court house, it was disclosed yesterday.

However, the Public Buildings Administration, which made the announcement, admitted that it may be another 10 or 12 months before construction is started on the urgently needed court house.

At the same time it was conceded that the new structure will cost much more than the original estimate of $10,300,000.

Congress has designated a site for the new court house, on the spacious District-owned parking lot which is directly south of the Municipal Center. The site is bounded by the Municipal Center, John Marshall pl., 3d st. and Constitution ave. The new building will front on John Marshall pl.

The Difference

Sumner Gretchell, normally a salesman but now acting a bit in Milton Sperling's "Ever the Beginning" at Warner Bros., says the only difference between the two professions is that a salesman has to make up his own dialogue and do his performance in one take, or else.

One on the Aisle

Supercolossal Ballet
Plush Smothers A Tender Story

By Richard L. Coe

"THE UNFINISHED DANCE," at the Capitol, is undeniably a striking thing to watch—ballet on the grand scale, photographed inTechnicolor and staged with the lush elan which only a studio like M-G-M can provide.

With Margaret O'Brien, Cyd Charisse and Karin Booth in the leading roles, this is the rich descendant of a French film you may recall from 1938—"Ballerina." Originally, it was a novel by Paul Merand, "The Death of the Swan." In a way, the change is from rags to too much riches.

For the story is an exceedingly delicate one. While the original's ballet sequences may have lacked the gorgeous trappings of this colorful offspring, the story was told in a more tender manner. Somehow one can't help regretting that so valiant an attempt doesn't come off as well as it might have.

Margaret O'Brien plays one of the "little rats" of the ballet company—youngsters of the ballet school who appear in brief scenes with the older dancers. She has a girlish crush on the leading ballerina, and when a more famous dancer arrives Margaret sees her as a threat to her idol's popularity. In an effort to embarrass the newcomer, she pulls what she thinks is a light switch but which really opens a trap door on the stage.

The dancer's career as a prima ballerina is through.

Gradually, fear of discovery and finally, remorse, eat into the child's mind. She goes to the injured woman and tries to explain. The tragedy of her act becomes more terrifying to her when she realizes that her idol has no real love for her art and that the injured dancer is a far finer character.

Such a role is immensely difficult for a child performer, excessively so for the little O'Brien, who lacks the subtlety of being able to convey her turmoil with much more than a scowl. Her dancing scenes are quite charming, however, though this reporter is not qualified to discuss her technical skill.

The Lovely Karin Booth

A comparative newcomer, Karin Booth, does spendidly as the injured ballerina. She has a strikingly lovely face, a bit reminiscent of Alexis Smith, but blessed with a far warmer, gentler screen personality. Hers, by the way, is the role originally played by Mia Slavenska, a performance that should surely have been rewarded by a wider career. Miss Slavenska, our favorite ballet dancer nforms up, is now teaching her rt in Hollywood.

In the less sympathetic of the wo adult parts, Cyd Charisse is pretty but banal. A role has been written in for Danny Thomas, a comedian new to the screen, but it is out of place and holds back the story. While we found the character annoying, perhaps in another role he will be seen to better advantage.

David Lichine directed the dances. His long experience in international ballet plus the all-out Metro production has brought ballet figures of eye-filling patterns. Among the numbers are Tschaikowsky's "Swan Lake," the underworld scene of "Faust" and a hundred-string arrangement of David Rose's "Holiday for Strings," the film's finale.

"The Unfinished Dance" is refreshing attempt. But somehow its essentially simple story and its lavish opulence don't quite fit together.

GEORGE M. COHAN, jr., headlines the Capitol's stage bill . . . Oldtimers we noted at yesterday's first performance had a happy, far-off look in their faces . . . The fact remains, however, that young George is trying the impossible . . . He's a pale imitation of his dad, and by basing his act on the original Yankee Doodle Boy he hides whatever individuality he might have himself . . . It's a nostalgic act, aided considerably by Johnny McLaughlin at the piano . . . McLaughlin accompanied and conducted for Cohan the Great for 27 years . . . Also on the bill are Gary Morton, an imitative comedian, and the D'Ivons, a dance team . . . Milt Slosser's got a medley of Jolson tunes at the organ.

"LITTLE RATS" NOTE: The Dance Theater announced a performance of ballet children Sunday afternoon at its studio, 2012 P st. nw., at 3:30 . . . The youngsters will offer "The Princess and the Pea," from the Hans Christian Andersen tale, under the direction of Erika Thimey and Batya Heller.

KEN MAYNARD'S on his way with Tarzan . . . The picture star and his horse will be along at Uline Arena for a six-day run with a rodeo show opening Tuesday, October 7 . . . Maynard promises to give away a real cowboy pony at each performance.

Newsmen on Missouri Fought Navy Censors

By Drew Pearson

None of the newsmen traveling with President Truman on the battleship Missouri wrote about it, but they had quite a battle with the Navy over press censorship.

What the Navy wanted censored was not a military secret, but the fact that the battleship was equipped with a ladies' toilet, plus certain details of Father Neptune's initiation of "Pollywogs" when the Missouri crossed the Equator.

The four newsmen on whom the Navy frowned were hard-punching Windsor Booth of Time magazine; erudite Charles P. Trussell of the New York Times; United Press Correspondent Merriman Smith, and Joe Short of the Baltimore Sun.

Crossing-the-Equator ceremonies had been prepared by the ship's crew long in advance—in fact, when they rented $400 worth of costumes back in Norfolk, Va. For days, also, those sailors previously initiated had been whittling paddles and shillelaghs, gloting over uninitiated victims. So the ceremony was rough. It was even rough for one of the top White House dignitaries, John Steelman, who was abruptly dumped backward 8 feet into a pool of water. Steelman, however, took it like a sport.

Sailors Get Rough

For the 1000 gobs who never before had crossed the Equator, it was even rougher. They underwent "mock" surgical operations with electrically charged knives on an operating table. They were ducked until they yelled "Royal Shellback," and they had to run the gantlet of 50 to 300 fellow sailors armed with paddles and canvas bags of water.

Decks got slippery. Men careened and fell. Finally the party got so rough the captain called the entire show off. But in the melee several men got hurt—16 got some first aid—of these 14 remained on duty.

It was this and other realistic reporting of the initiation roughhouse that brought the Navy's demand for censorship. When newsmen balked, White House Secretary Charlie Ross called a special press conference, blasted correspondents for "inaccuracy."

Ross

"I have a right to prevent the filing of such stories," he announced, "but I am not going to exercise that right."

Ross said he was "hurt" by the "reflection" on the Navy. But he permitted the news stories to be sent as written.

Official ire was especially heaped on the red head of Time Magazine's Booth because he had reported the discovery of a ladies' toilet aboard the battleship. This has come to be a much-debated subject in the Nation's Capital ever since grandmotherly Mrs. May Craig, correspondent for the Portland (Me.) Evening Express, was refused permission to return from Rio on the battleship. Official reason: no ladies' toilet facilities aboard.

So when Booth discovered such facilities plainly labeled "Ladies" and proposed sending a dispatch to this effect over the ship's radio, the Navy hit the ceiling. Booth, however, insisted, and the Navy finally sent the story.

(Editor's note: The Navy explained this was only a temporary arrangement for in-port visits by guests of the ship.)

Note—When Herbert Hoover made his goodwill tour to Latin America just after his 1928 election, the Navy flatly refused to transmit critical news stories from the battleships Utah and Maryland. Newsmen had to wait until they got home to do this critical reporting.

Truman's Faith in U. S.

Biggest question mark raised at President Truman's Cabinet food conference was: "Will the American people ration themselves to help Europe?"

This question was debated when the President met with Secretary of State Marshall, Secretary of Agriculture Anderson, Secretary of Commerce Harriman and Presidential Assistant Steelman. It was Mr. Truman himself who gave the final answer.

"Of course, they will cooperate," he declared, "when they know the truth. I have great faith in the American people. They may be calloused in some things, but you can always count on them in times of disaster."

Spuds for Europe

Various food plans were put forward at the Cabinet conference, chiefly by Secretary Anderson. Here is a summary of what the Cabinet Food Committee proposed:

1. We now export about 8 per cent of our grain, and simultaneously waste another 10 per cent. (Rats contribute to much of this loss.) As we eliminate this waste, we will have to do less rationing at home.

2. Secretary Anderson proposed sending Europe other types of food than grain, especially fruit, of which there is a surplus on the Pacific Coast. Though fruit is more expensive to ship, the President and his advisers felt that the American people would not kick too much about the extra expense if it was a question of saving lives.

3. It was proposed that the American people eat more potatoes and less grain. Potatoes are not a good export food because they rot en route. Therefore, the Food Committee agreed that more potato-eating here at home not only would save the grain, but would result in no calorie losses to the American diet.

"Peace Bonds"

Fiscal officials of the Truman administration have been working backstage on a very important plan for subsidizing Europe. It boils down to this: if Congress won't appropriate the money for the Marshall Plan, the American people may be asked to subscribe it.

In other words, a "Peace Bond Issue" may be sold to banks, insurance companies and the public, just as War Bonds were sold prior to VJ-Day.

Secretary of the Treasury Snyder, now in London, and World Bank President John J. McCloy, also in Europe, have been exchanging cables with Washington officials regarding this idea. They seem to believe the American public is one step ahead of Congress regarding the urgency of aid to Europe. Furthermore, the bond sales campaign in itself would have the important educational value of awakening the public regarding the American stake in Europe.

No definite decision has been taken, but the plan is getting warm.

U. S. to Buy Land For Jefferson Forest

Pearisburg, Va., Sept. 25 (AP).—Arrangements are nearing completion for purchase by the Federal Government of approximately 21,000 acres of mountainous timberland in Giles and Bland Counties for inclusion in the Jefferson National Forest.

Sources here said attorneys now are abstracting the title to the land, owned by David E. Conley, Rocky Gap lumberman. The deal was confirmed at Roanoke by the office of A. R. Cochran, supervisor of the Jefferson Forest for the United States Department of Agriculture.

2 New Cases Bring Va. Polio Total to 103

Richmond, Va., Sept. 25 (AP).—Two new cases of poliomyelitis were reported to the State Health Department today, raising Virginia's recorded total for the year to 103.

The new cases, both involving minors, were reported in Arlington and Rockbridge counties, and the reports came only one day after the health department announced that 10 new cases had been reported on Wednesday.

Md. Board Acts To Stop Pollution Of State's Rivers

Baltimore, Sept. 25 (AP).—The Maryland Water Pollution Control Commission is preparing to act against two Anne Arundel County real estate subdivision operators for allegedly dumping sewage in the South and Severn Rivers.

Complaints against the developments were filed yesterday with the commission—set up by an act of the 1947 Legislature—by Dr. William J. French, Anne Arundel County health officer, who said the operators failed to heed warnings to stop the dumping.

Dr. Robert H. Riley, commission member and State health director, said that "no doubt the attitude of these polluters and others like them will be different when they realize the power vested in the new group."

Welding Plant Blast Jars West Va. Town

Spencer, W. Va., Sept. 25 (AP).—A terrific explosion which jarred this entire community early today leveled the Starcher Welding plant, injured four persons and caused property damage estimated by Police Chief Ernest Barnes at from $40,000 to $50,000.

Barnes said the explosion, at first believed to have been caused by acetylene, resulted from the valve was broken off a 575-gallon tank of liquefied propane, a heating gas, as it was being unloaded from a truck at the welding plant.

Board Absolves Police Chief Of Frederick

Frederick, Md., Sept. 25.—The Board of Aldermen last night accepted a report from the City Police Commission absolving Chief of Police Frederick M. Straley of dereliction of duty charges preferred by Sergt. Daniel E. Swomley.

In accepting the report as submitted, the aldermen closed the case.

Manuel M. Weinberg, attorney for Swomley, announced his intention to seek a postponement of similar charges preferred against Lieut. Reno O. Six, which will be considered by the police commission next Monday night. Weinberg said he intends to seek a ruling from the Attorney General on the proper method of taking evidence at such a hearing.

Chief Straley was specifically charged with threatening Swomley; failing to take action on frequent complaints against Lieutenant Six and other officers regarding their absence without leave, and ordering charges dismissed against an individual which had been preferred by an officer on November 4, 1946.

He was also charged with distributing a sum of money to the police force as a Christmas gift without any explanation of the origin of the fund but with the instruction to "take this and keep your mouth shut."

The commission ruled that evidence submitted failed to substantiate the charges. Swomley testified that the $10 given each policeman last Christmas came from private funds collected to provide Yuletide baskets for the poor. Straley contended the money came from profits of a candy and soft drink vending machine at headquarters.

The commission said there was nothing to prove the gifts came from the poor fund, stating: "The money collected by the policemen for the poor has been very loosely handled and the money received from the candy and soft drink vending machines has also been most carelessly handled."

Neither Straley nor Swomley had any comment following acceptance of the report.

Va. Hospital, Schools Seek Added Funds

Harrisonburg, Va., Sept. 25 (AP).—Governor Tuck and his advisory budget commission received a budget request for the 1948-50 biennium today from Western State Hospital and the Virginia School for the Deaf and Blind at Staunton, and Madison College at Harrisonburg.

Increased costs of food and higher salaries and wages continued to account for major increases in the budget of each institution. Western State Hospital asked an operating budget for the next two years of $3,248,989, an increase of $1,649,899.

The hospital also asked an additional fund of $3,435,706 for new buildings and other improvements, which with funds previously appropriated would provide a total of $5,019,988 for capital outlays. Of this, $4,498,888 would represent the estimated costs for a group of new buildings planned on the new Western State site near Dejarnette Sanatorium.

At the same hearing, the budget commission received estimates from Dejarnette Sanatorium on its operations, expenses of which are paid out of patients' revenues. The sanatorium estimated its budget for the new biennium at $540,209, an increase of $186,000 over the present biennium.

The Virginia School for the Deaf and Blind estimated its needs from the State for the new biennium at $951,400, an increase of $259,727 over the present biennium. The school also asked $642,200 for additional buildings, and to cover increased costs on buildings for which funds previously have been appropriated.

Among the new structures asked was a dormitory for blind children estimated to cost $232,900.

Dr. Samuel P. Duke, president of Madison College, submitted a new biennial budget calling for $554,018 from the State's general fund which represents an increase of $133,942 over 1946-48. The college also asked for $446,000 for buildings and equipment.

This money was requested for remodeling and equipping three old dormitories, the erection of a new $250,000 dormitory, an infirmary building and miscellaneous capital outlays. The current inspection tour will end tomorrow with visits in Blue Ridge Sanatorium and the University of Virginia at Charlottesville.

303,000 Chicks Hatched In Week in 9 Counties

Richmond, Va., Sept. 25 (AP).—Hatcheries in the nine-county area of the Shenandoah Valley in Virginia and West Virginia set 445,000 eggs and hatched 303,000 chicks during the week ended September 13, the Cooperative Crop Reporting Service said today.

Placement by hatcheries in the area combined with inshipments by contract feed dealers showed a slight decrease over the previous week, the report noted and pointed out that eggs set during the week increased 1 per cent over the previous week.

BACKACHE, LEG PAINS MAY BE DANGER SIGN Of Tired Kidneys

If backache and leg pains are making you miserable, don't just complain and do nothing about them. Nature may be warning you that your kidneys need attention.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes show there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, used successfully by millions for over 50 years. Doan's give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

36 Traffic Deaths In Md. in August; Total Under '46

Baltimore, Sept. 25 (AP).—Thirty-six persons were killed and 773 injured in traffic accidents in Maryland during August, the Traffic Safety Commission said.

This brought the total of traffic fatalities for the first eight months of 1947 to 248, a 5-per-cent decrease compared with the same period of 1946.

It listed 12 counties as having a fatality-free month last August: Anne Arundel, Caroline, Carroll, Garrett, Harford, Kent, Montgomery, Queen Anne, St. Marys, Talbot, Wicomico and Worcester.

Crime Protested In Anne Arundel

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 25 (AP).—The Citizens Protective League has called on Anne Arundel County commissioners to put a stop to a "wave of burglaries, thefts and violations of numerous State laws," in the county.

In a letter the league's board of governors declared "such violations indicate that the criminal element feel that Anne Arundel County is a lucrative place in which to operate."

The commissioners referred the complaints to the police department. Several vacancies now exist in the grade of patrolman in the county system. Chief John H. Soures said applicants must be between 24 and 49. The starting pay is $2100 annually.

Carey Found Guilty Of Wife-Murder

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 25 (AP).—Nason D. Carey, 45, was convicted of second-degree murder here in Anne Arundel County Court of slaying his wife, Alverta, 33, with a claw hammer.

The jury found him guilty after he had testified he killed her when she picked up a butcher knife in a quarrel in their one-room apartment.

UAW Asks Labor Board Count in Md. Election

Baltimore, Sept. 25 (AP).—The United Automobile Workers (CIO) filed a motion with the National Labor Relations Board here asking an immediate count of contested ballots in a collective bargaining election at the Glenn L. Martin Co. and charged the agency was violating provisions of both the Wagner and the Taft-Hartley Acts.

The union contended that the board was obliged to count the ballots and publish the results regardless of the fact that the union's officials as well as its parent organization have not signed non-Communist pledges required under the Taft-Hartley law.

Follow the 10-Day Diet, But Remember—

It Takes Exercise, Too, To Streamline Figure

By Ida Jean Kain

FASHION designers have used all the tricks of the trade to whittle the middle skillfully and turn solid substance into shadow. The rest is up to you! With the right twist on exercise, you can do your waist a good turn.

But let's get started with the right muscles for waist trimming. Instead of regarding the waist as a definite line, realize that waist slimming depends on the network of muscles which wrap around the midriff. Here's a test that tells where the slimming must start.

Place thumb and forefinger around the waist at sides, not too far toward the back. Now spread apart, fan-shaped, the remaining three fingers on each hand, spanning the side-front of the abdomen, or that part of the anatomy you may call the stomach. Pull snugly up with the lower abdominal muscles and press gently in with the spread fingers. There, that is where the waist starts to spread.

Muscles to Work On

These side-front muscles, called the external obliques, span up and out from the major abdominal muscles, wrap around the sides of the midriff and attach into the lower eight ribs. Beneath these are the internal obliques with fibers running across those of the outer muscles.

Naturally when these muscles that band the waist lose tone and bulk out, the waist widens . . . all part of the middle spread. But it's nice to know that tone in these muscles, because of their curved position around the side-front of the figure, help flatten the stomach too. Since they do all that, the following exercise will be a positive pleasure.

The Work Begins

First, find how flexible your waist muscles are . . .

Position: Standing on knees, knees wide apart, arms stretched straight out at shoulders, shoulder level. Tighten abdominal girdle by pulling up slim through the middle . . . keep shoulders easy.

Movement: Bend sideward at the waist; and try to touch the fingers to floor at sides. Don't cheat! It's cheating if you crumble in the middle, or allow hips to jut rearward. Back to position, with arms out at shoulder level and bend slowly and try to touch fingers to floor at opposite side. Alternative sides, repeat six times only. Later increase to 20 times.

If your waist muscles refuse to give, don't force them—the aim is to be supple, not stiff. From the same position, standing on knees, sit back on your heels, clasp hands above head, pull slim through the middle and bend gently, first to one side and then the other. Take it easy . . . practice will increase the bend and lessen the waist.

For "Strolling in the Park One Day"...

WHAT to wear on a clear, cool autumn day when the leaves are falling along Connecticut Avenue and the toddler set is gathering in historic, old Dupont Circle? That's an answer several young, young Washingtonians will have for you when they join the adult models in the Smith College benefit fashion show at the Mayflower October 2 and 3. Here two of the little mannequins, in dress rehearsal clothes, get a lesson on how to walk from Mrs. Stephen Preston, member of the Smith College Alumnae Association

Sandy Walker, jr., son of Dr. and Mrs. Allan E. Walker, jr., is all set to make the girls sit up and take notice in a snappy brown tweed coat and cap. Not so sure she cares for this modeling business is diminutive Lynn Dorsey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Dorsey. She's a real beauty though, attired in a deep rose flannel coat with detachable cape piped in brown velvet and matching rose bonnet. Both costumes are from a Connecticut Avenue shop

Mary Haworth's Mail

Woman With Good Husband and Two Lovely Children Is Lonely and Resentful Because Her Better Half Prefers Reading to Talk

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a very lonely wife. I have a good husband and we're both in love and have two lovely children; but my problem is his bad habit of reading.

He reads during breakfast, says a few words and is off to work. I look forward all day to his homecoming,—but he comes home to a book, not to me. In the evenings he reads during supper, saying very little. He does help to put the children to bed; then promptly goes back to reading.

He reads anything readable—newspapers, magazines, comic books, stuff like that. I'd like him to tell me about his work, and I want to talk to him about happenings of the day, the children and other things. But he's always reading.

Man's Reading Sparks Quarrels

WE'VE HAD quite a few arguments about it. I get angry and for a couple of days he pays me a little more attention. Then he goes back to reading. I'm not a jabbering wife. I just want some conversation and a little attention once in a while. Is that asking too much?

He says my conversation isn't important. But must I have something very important to say before I interrupt his reading? I've tried to read with him, but I get tired of it and go to bed. He'd read late every night if I didn't tell him to get some rest, as we have to start the day early.

I love him too much to leave him; but sometimes I've gone so far as to threaten divorce, due to his reading. Then he gets worried and puts aside his reading for a while. Again last night we had such an argument and today I made up my mind to get your advice on what to do with a man like that. Can you help me? L. C.

Shrewish Tone To Complaint

DEAR L. C.: My sympathies are always with those who love to read, as versus anybody who might seek to deprive them of that pleasure, solace or source of enlightenment, as the case may be.

Thus from my viewpoint, the problem here is not so much your husband's avid if uneducated appetite for reading, but rather your ignorant impatience with that proclivity.

The tart self righteous tone and tedious repetitive phrasing of your complaint (here edited considerably) suggest that you are a shrewish boring ninny, whose conversational pitch and choice of topics doubtless are trite and trivial—enough to drive a patient man to cover, behind the pages of a newspaper, magazine, comic book or whatever.

Thus the $64 question is: Can you help yourself? Can you change for the better?

Wife's Carping Isn't Sensible

A SMART sensible wife could do a great deal with a husband like yours—a faithful plodder, good to his family, with an idiosyncrasy of concentrating on printed matter when at home. She would be philosophic about this idiosyncrasy, recognizing its constructive potentials.

She would give it liberal house room and develop it into a partnership asset, using it as part of the building material of a thriving companionship. How? Well, in various ways.

To begin, by making a point of giving him certified leisure and comfortable accoutrements for daily reading — excellent light, good lounging chair; books, newspapers, magazines neatly at hand. Also the privilege—with her blessing—of holding his peace and studying the morning paper at breakfast!

Secondly, by boning up on what he reads; that she might speak his language on that score, and when shopping, fetch him fresh supply to suit his current taste. Finally, by fostering an interest in solid literature—good fiction, biography, etc.—relating to his favorite subjects, written by outstanding authors, using gift-occasions to start a book collection and shelves to hold them.

All this would improve his self respect, education, social presence and earning capacity; be of indirect cultural benefit to the children, and make him love you twice as much. But if you can't be that big in heart and mind, you can at least stop nagging and talking divorce. And you certainly should, if you care for him and want to hold him. M. H.

Susy Bidault Is a Diplomat In Own Right

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

BY THE END of next week Washington's long stored red carpets and potted palms are due to be unearthed for Mme. Georges Bidault, wife of the French Premier. Usually political big-wigs travel solo so it's a treat to see what their wives look like.

Mme. Bidault, who's affectionately known as "Susy" to the French public, is quite a numero. Smart as a whip, she was the first woman to be graduated from the "concours" and admitted to the French diplomatic service. Right after she was admitted the French ungallantly closed diplomatic careers to women—so she reigned supreme in the French Foreign Office on the Quai d'Orsay. (De Gaulle, incidentally, reopened the diplomatic service to women.)

She met Georges Bidault during the war when both were dangerously active in the resistance movement. Later, whn he became a member of the French cabinet he invited her to be one of his assistants. Just after the San Francisco Conference they were married. Mme. Bidault speaks English, Russian, a handful of other tongues.

Martha's Charm

THE WIT and infectious humor of Mrs. Robert Taft, which knocked feminine audiences for a loop out in Seattle where the Tafts are doing political barnstorming, is well known to her Washington friends. In the more elegant circles in which the Tafts normally gyrate, she's regarded tolerantly as a delightful, if sometimes embarrassing, enfant terrible.

No glamour girl, she's shortish, plumpish, but literally aglow with friendliness. At a dressy cocktail party where most women are awash with sequins and feathers, she'll turn up in sweater, skirt and with her knitting. (The knitting, like Penelope's tapestry, never seems to get done).

She appraises the crowd with an expert eye. If there's anyone she thinks looks interesting, Mrs. Taft will barge up and say "Im Martha Taft—who are you?" It is a disarming, as well as flattering technique. And, inevitably, her victim is tickled, decides the Tafts are pretty nice.

Robert Taft, publicized as aloof and shy, is quite a different person at ease. He is at his best after dinner at Mrs. Nicholas Longworth's. Relaxed in an easy chair, he is warm, brilliant and, incredibly, an out and out spellbinder.

Seven Travelers or None

AIRLINES groan, figuratively speaking, when the Walter Donnellys ask for reservations. Mr. Donnelly, who's one of our most efficient diplomats, has been appointed Ambassador to Venezuela. His extra tall, thin wife is a Colombian and there are five young Donnellys.

Now most large families, when traveling by air, prefer to split on the off chance of an accident. Not so the Donnellys.

If anything happens, it must happen to all. So, seven seats in the same plane have to be reserved anytime the Donnellys make a move.

. . . So They Were Married

THIS IS POSITIVELY the last King Carol-Lupescu story. It's interesting we think, and true as true. Though the former King of Romania's devotion to Mme. Lupescu can never be questioned, marriage to her would lose him any vague chance of regaining his long lost throne.

When Mme. Lupescu supposedly lay dying in Rio de Janeiro, Carol realized that for safety's sake he had put most of his money and foreign holdings in her name. If she, a Romanian citizen, died in Brazil, there undoubtedly would be legal complications, the money might be tied up and Carol left strapped for an indeterminate period.

So a death-bed wedding took place, the bride recovered, and the couple, presumably legally married, have sailed to Lisbon. Mme. Lupescu is now arbitrarily titled Princess Helena, which is sure to cause trouble (though her real name is Magda Elena) since Carol's second wife, Princess Helen of Greece, is known as the Queen Mother Elena in Romania.

Parties Honor Miss Willett

Miss Lillian Hathaway Willett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. Jean Willett, has chosen November 4 as the date of her wedding to William Sasscer Hill, son of Mrs. William Sasscer Hill and the late Mr. Hill of Pleasant Hills Farm, Upper Marlboro, Md. The ceremony will take place in St. Thomas' Episcopal Church at 4:30 p. m. and a reception will be held at the Shoreham Hotel.

A series of parties have been planned to honor Miss Willett and her fiance. Mr. and Mrs. George Buchheister will give a small dinner party at their home on Saturday. On September 30, Miss Mary N. S. Whitely and her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Whitely, will entertain at a cocktail party for the couple. Mrs. Richard P. Snead, now in Boulder, Colo., has asked Mrs. Cecil Beasley to act as her proxy at a luncheon in honor of Miss Willett at the Mayflower Hotel on October 3. A cocktail party will be given by Mr. and Mrs. Elliot J. Dent on October 10.

At 3 p. m., foreign members of the board of the National Woman's Party placed wreaths at the base of the Suffrage Monument in the crypt of the Capitol and later they carried a tribute of gratitude to Adelaide Johnson, sculptress of the monument, who was one of the founders of the International Council of Women.

New Adult Education Classes

People who've been wondering what to do with their spare time now that summer is over have been signing up in droves for the YWCA's adult education classes which begin a new term Monday.

Registrations already have passed the 700 mark for the many subjects—more than 50—offered men and women at the big building on the corner of 17th and K sts. nw.

Emphasis is being placed this term on the professional writing courses, which includes a new class in the short story and supervised writing of fiction. Instructors will suggest markets and help students sell their manuscripts.

Intriguing women applicants is a new class in making costume jewelry, also a course in modern marriage which has been added to the "brides' school." With the revolutionary style trends, the girls are flocking to the dressmaking class, which will feature ways to make the old dress look smart this winter.

Those popular recreation courses—bridge, art (painting, ceramics, handcraft) and music—are attracting numerous recruits as usual, and language classes continue high in popularity. A new course of English for foreigners has been added this term.

Hospital Board Plans Benefit

Ladies Board of Georgetown University Hospital will meet for luncheon Monday, 1 p. m., in the board room of the new hospital.

Discussion of the annual benefit scheduled for November 12 at the Mayflower Hotel will follow. Mrs. Leon Martel, newly-elected president, will preside. Other new officers include Mrs. John Brazinski, recording secretary; Mrs. Benjamin Mundell, treasurer; Mrs. Ernest Aschenbach, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. William D. Willcoxon, Mrs. J. Winthrop Peabody, Mrs. Paul O'Donnell, Mrs. Henry I. Quinn and Mrs. John O'Donoghue, vice presidents.

Army Still Seeks Nurses

Applicants for commission in the occupational therapist section must have served honorably within the same period as a qualified occupational therapist with the medical department of the Army in the status of a civilian employe.

Application forms may be obtained from the Army Medical Center (Walter Reed General Hospital), Georgia ave. and Butternut sts. nw.

Dean Kayser to Speak at 20th Century Club

Dean Elmer L. Kayser of George Washington University will be guest speaker for the meeting of Twentieth Century Club, 11 a. m. Thursday, in Barker Hall, YWCA.

Miss Kennedy To Address Club

The first meeting this season of B'nai B'rith Women, Argo, scheduled for 1 p. m., October 2, at Jewish Community Center, will be devoted to "Tomorrow's America."

Miss Eunice Kennedy, special assistant to the Attorney General on youth problems, will be guest speaker. Mrs. Hazel Kenyon Markel, education director of WTOP-CBS, will present a "Youth Takes a Stand" program, participants being Hillel students and B'nai B'rith young men and women.

A reception and tea will follow the program.

Keep Right On Saving Used Fats

WOR's Martha Deane, Star Radio Commentator

Yes, indeed . . . there's still a need for every pound of salvaged fat we can get. Here's what Secretary of Commerce W. A. Harriman says about the situation: "Not only the United States but the entire world still lacks adequate supplies of fats and oils." We in America are particularly short of industrial fats. Many of the things we all use require industrial fats or their products. So please . . . keep on with the magnificent job you've been doing. Turn in your used cooking fat regularly. It's a real help.

Ask Anne
Your Questions On Homemaking

We were given a set of hickory and rattan garden furniture which had been long in storage. It was thoroughly dried out, in fact, the hickory broke in several places when it was put into use. What is the proper treatment to recondition the set? A. S. G.

This furniture would undoubtedly profit by rubbing with a solution of linseed oil and turpentine, although it must have deteriorated considerably to break so easily. Use two parts boiled linseed oil and one part turpentine. Heat together in a double boiler, and rub well into the furniture. Wipe off excess. Do this for two consecutive days, then every week for several weeks. If the natural gloss has disappeared from the rattan, it can be restored by varnishing.

I have been kitting Argyle socks and find that some of the yarn used is not dye-proof. Is there anything that might be added to the wash water to prevent the dyes from running? I use lukewarm suds to wash the socks, do not soak them, rinse immediately squeeze out excess moisture in a Turkish towel, and place the socks on stretchers. T. H.

Adding a little acetic acid or vinegar to the wash water is sometimes recommended for making colors more fast, although experts say there's no sure way to set "fugitive" colors. Your washing method seems a most careful one. Using cooler suds (85 to 90 degrees F.) might be helpful.

I have a bleached mahogany table and limed oak end tables and should like to know how best to care for them. Is furniture polish or furniture wax used weekly advisable? R. M.

Furniture in ordinary home use shouldn't be waxed or polished more than two or three times a year. In between times, give it regular treatments with "elbow grease." Dust daily and rub with a soft flannel polishing cloth with the grain of the wood, and you can build up a beautiful lustrous surface. Some people prefer wax, others polish, for use on furniture. Wax gives more protection, but takes more work to keep shining. If you use wax, purchase a light-colored paste or liquid wax for your blonde and limed oak furniture.

Fall's Favorite Dessert

Pie Pleases Everybody's Sweet Tooth

By Henry Rohland—The Washington Post

Hot, spicy and ready to serve with a square of snappy cheese is this pie made with tart smokehouse apples

By Lucia Brown

SOMEHOW there's nothing quite so right for dessert on a crisp fall evening as a succulent wedge of richly flavored pie.

It's an old-fashioned favorite—first made back around 1300, so historians say—a treat that's loved by sweet-tooths from 7 to 70.

APPLE PIE

4 medium-sized cooking apples (1 pound)
½ standard recipe pastry
½ cup sugar
¼ teaspoon cinnamon
1 tablespoon butter
2 teaspoons water

Peel and core apples. Slice thin. Roll ½ of pastry ⅛-inch thick. Line a small pie pan (6-inch). Fill with apples. Sprinkle with sugar and cinnamon. Dot with butter and add water. Cover with remaining crust rolled ⅛-inch thick and slashed to allow escape of steam. Bake in hot oven (450 degrees F.) 15 minutes. Reduce heat to moderate (350 degrees F.) and bake 45 minutes longer. This makes four portions. Serve with topping of hard sauce, whipped cream or ice cream, or a square of nippy cheese.

NESSELRODE PIE

3 eggs separated.
1½ cups milk.
1/3 to ½ cup sugar.
2 teaspoons unflavored gelatin.
1 tablespoon cold water.
2 tabespoons rum flavoring.
¼ cup chopped Maraschino cherries.
2 tablespoons sweet chocolate, shaved.
Baked 9-inch pastry shell.

Combine slightly beaten egg yolks, milk, salt and 1/3 cup sugar in top of double boiler. Cook over hot, not boiling, water until mixture thickens, stirring constantly. Remove from hot water; soften gelatin in cold. Add to hot mixture and stir until dissolved. Chill until mixture begins to thicken. Beat egg whites stiff but not dry, gradually beating in remaining sugar. Fold into gelatin mixture with rum flavoring and cherries. Pile into baked pastry shell, sprinkle with chocolate, and chill until firm. Yields four portions.

PEACH CREAM PIE

2 tablespoons sugar.
¼ teaspoon almond flavoring.
2½ cups canned sliced peaches.
Baked pastry shell.

Whip cream until it holds its shape. Fold in sugar and flavoring. Drain peaches and arrange in baked pastry shell. Top with whipped cream mixture. Sprinkle with macaroon crumbs and chill slightly before serving. Approximate yield, one 9-inch pie.

ALABAMA SWEET POTATO PIE

1½ cups mashed, hot sweet potatoes.
3 eggs, slighlty beaten.
1/3 cup firmly packed brown sugar.
¼ teaspoon cinnamon.
¼ teaspoon ginger.
¼ teaspoon allspice.
2 tablespoons melted butter.
Line 8-inch pie plate with pastry.

Mix together ingredients in order given. Turn into prepared pie plate and bake in hot oven (450 degrees Fahrenheit) 10 minutes. Then reduce heat to moderate (350 degrees Fahrenheit) and bake 25 to 35 minutes longer, or until knife inserted comes out clean. Yield, one 8-inch pie.

The Bean Pot

Drop a teaspoon of soda in the bean pot after using and fill with boiling water. Let stand in the oven of the range or in a warm place for about 2 hours. This will clean it perfectly, making the sides and bottom of the pot smooth and clean once more.

Market Memo
By Lucia Brown

MEAT prices will be down a bit over the weekend, owing to the recent drop in wholesale prices . . . though some butchers still have cuts purchased at the higher price on hand.

That hurricane in the Gulf has blown fish prices higher . . . the boats couldn't go out, so little seafood is coming from the South. Even Chesapeake croakers and spots are up in price because of greater demand. Local trout are about the best buy. Crab meat is still comparatively cheap . . . but look for a rise in two or three weeks. Chesapeake fishermen are catching oysters instead of crabs now . . . so most of our crab meat will soon have to come from Louisiana.

Canada rutabagas . . . sweetest of any, they say . . . have started to arrive.

England's Dire Rationing Cuts Even to Handkerchiefs

By Susan Schwartz

CATCHING a cold in England has serious consequences. A new handkerchief costs one coupon. (In the next seven months adults will have 20 coupons to spend for all clothing, ribbons, knitting wools and yard goods.) Soap cannot be wasted in washing handkerchiefs when the ration equals three bars a month.

American-style paper handkerchiefs are nonexistent and the home brand, if obtainable, has the texture of wax paper. But more Englishmen are sure to catch more colds because last winter's weekly coal ration of two scuttlesful per person may be reduced even further.

No Pleasure Driving

When I left England on August 30, economic life was at the subsistence level and threatening to fall below it. All pleasure driving was banned as of October 1 and the domestic automobile market was vanishing rapidly. English automobiles are bought to last for at least 10 years; only the motors change, and a new car is indistinguishable from an old one except for the worn upholstery.

Punch Settles Issue

The weekly meat ration was 20 cents per person. "Punch" settled a newspaper controversy about the loveliest age of a baby by favoring any age up to the time the little one was old enough to consume its own bacon ration. Housewives received 1 ounce of cooking fat, 3 ounces of butter and 3 ounces of margarine a week and, if lucky, managed to wangle their allotted 2½ pints of milk from the limited supply of their milkman.

All foreign travel, except for business and educational purposes, has been prohibited after October 1. Travelers who manage to go abroad before the ban cannot take any personal jewelry with them, including diamond engagement or wedding rings, unless they procure an almost unobtainable export license. People who can afford to eat out during the week and thereby save points for weekend splurging, may soon have to surrender points for restaurant meals.

With the power to direct unemployed persons into essential industries, the Government hopes to increase its coal and export production with the help of the "spivs," who live by their wits. They can be seen on every street corner selling peaches which are too expensive for the working classes, although they cost only the American equivalent of 10 cents each. Spivs also hang out in the Haymarket and exchange $20 American travelers' checks for $2 more than the legal rate.

On Sweater's Trail

I discovered one explanation for the shabby and dull clothing of the average Englishman when I tried to buy the female traveler's goal, a Scotch sweater. Department store stocks are extremely limited in style, size and color because sweaters are on the all-important export list and retail outlets have monthly quotas. Furthermore, sweaters require six coupons, and a sweater costing $10 in London would not cost more than $16 in the States.

I had been told, by Americans, that I would be able to buy clothes coupon-free if I had them mailed home. In two months in England, only four shops I visited had the necessary export licenses, and they were reluctant to use them.

Aquascutum raincoats cost as much in England as they do in America and they have a coupon value of not less than 15. A woolen dress, made to sell for $40 in the States, would cost about 2½ as much in England and would use 11 coupons.

Has Anyone Told You . . .

MEDICATED CHEWING GUM is a preventative and relief for sea, air, train and car sickness. Flight attendants on many of the air lanes have a supply of this gum on hand. It is also recommended for nausea in pregnancy and for the "morning after." The gum is packaged two to a catch-cover.

A NEW FUEL OIL SAVER, when properly installed in any pot-type, oil-burning room heater is said to save 25 per cent to 40 per cent on fuel oil, in producing the same amount of heat. It keeps soot and carbon from accumulating in heater and stack, and smoke and fumes from backfiring into the room.

TROUBLED WITH RUST in your hot water storage tank? A new rust-preventing device can be installed in the tank at reasonable cost. It does its work by an electro-chemical process which prevents corrosion and thus eliminates the production of rusty hot water by the galvanized steel of the tank.

Charming the Stag Line

A dance floor is hardly the place for a political debate. The partner who is gently guiding you across the floor is murmuring sweet somethings into your ear.

He will not be flattered or impressed with your knowledge if you answer with something profound about U. N. Security Council.

Knowing when and how to use small talk at a dance gives you the air of a poised charmer. A twinkling of the eye starts things off. "Something happened the other night that reminded me of you" piques his curiosity and inflames his ego.

Somebody cuts in at that point but your man comes rushing back at the first opportunity, to find out why you were reminded of him, of all people.

Dance floor etiquette, sprightly small talk, manners at the movies, in restaurants, as a house guest, are discussed in our Reader Service Booklet No. 45.

How to Store Summer Clothes

Now summer woolens are being put away and because soil attracts moths, everything woolen must be thoroughly cleaned. Even if the articles are known to be immaculate, they should be thoroughly brushed, aired and sunned before packing away. Special tools of the vacuum cleaner are perfect for going over everything and for delving into pockets deep seams and all the other dust traps.

Finally the wool must be thoroughly protected against moths. The best way is to spray everything, using an approved preparation.

"Mothproof" containers are useless and even dangerous unless the woolen articles are perfectly clean and free of larvae and, in addition, the container is tightly sealed. Articles treated with some preparations need no further protection. If there is any doubt upon storing woolens in a box or closet, the enclosure should be thoroughly sprayed, strictly according to directions and all openings sealed. One tiny "entrance" left can mean ruination of everything which has been stowed away inside.

Pausing for a friendly chat at the tea given Wednesday in Willard Hotel by Theta Sigma Phi, National Capital Alumnae Chapter, are (left to right) Washington Post Columnist Mary Haworth, a new initiate; Miss Ruth Quinlan, recent winner of the group's scholarship; Maj. Gretchen Thorp, USA, chapter president, and Miss Jeanette Harrington, national president. The party was to introduce new initiates and honorary and associate members of the professional journalistic fraternity for women

BOUNCING THE BETTER HALF. Few men can boast that they've tossed their wives out of clubs. But Capt. David Harter, husband of Gypsy Markoff, Balalaika star, did just that. Fact is, that's the way he met her. It happened when David was running a service club in Berlin. Tempestuous Gypsy got into a hot debate with some French visitors. David came up to quell this pint-sized battle, said, "Miss Markoff, you can't talk that way to our gallant allies"—or words to that effect. "You'll have to leave." Gypsy left, huffing "Pooh, pooh, to you!" . . . Two weeks later they were married, have been happy as a pair of pigeons. Watching Gypsy turn on her million-watt charm at the Balalaika, Captain Harter breathed, "Isn't she a sweetheart! How could I have thrown her out of anywhere?"

At the Rainbow Room

Jody Miller, one of our town's choicer little singers, will open at the Madrillon on Monday with Johnny Robb's Band. Sue Milroy is leaving Madrillon on a mysterious out-of-town engagement, will tell her public more about it later.

THE NEWCOMERS. Justifiably puffed up is the Neptune Room management. Their new pianist, Arthur Post, gives a magical touch to modern music, and Nat Conway's Shoreliners, slick and rhythm-wise, are inspiring applause from the hard-to-please Neptune crowd . . . "Lazy Bill" Huggins, his guitar and slippery songs, are keeping El Patio patrons right on the edge of their chairs . . . Kirby Walker, singing pianist of radio and records, is giving a glamor-haunted air to the interludes at Cross Roads . . . Earl ("That Groovy Thing") Bostic has the devotees of righteous rhythm a-rocking back and forth at the Bali.

Bandleader Sacha Lucas will return to Washington next week, in plenty of time to greet that bundle of joy that he and his Trudy are expecting in mid-October. His deal with the Brown Derby is off and he's now considering a couple of other spots.

BEAUTY AND BRAINS DEPARTMENT. Jeanne Shirley, exquisite new singer in the Mayflower Lounge, nearly became a school teacher, changed her mind after becoming "first lady of song" at Northwestern University, which she attended on an Edgar Bergen scholarship . . . Young Ronny Simpson, pretty new singer at the Old New Orleans, spends her daytime majoring in speech and drama at Catholic University . . . Barbara Grant, beauteous star of the Rainbow Room, won her success the hard way. Years of coaching and vocal study preceded her tremendous hit in "Best Foot Forward." . . . A self-made gal is Paula Rae, who sings in front of Bob Knight's band at the Lounge Riviera. While working as a hotel exec's secretary, she also studied music, won a few amateur contests, finally got her foot on the professional ladder. Now she's really in . . . Toni, pianist at Michel's, is doing research work in ancient Oriental music, especially the Persian . . . Maurita Gordon, lightly brilliant young pianist of the Uptown Cocktail Lounge, attended both Howard and Penn State U's, received her B. S. from the latter.

The Casino Royal is getting all hotted up for a big "Fall Opening Party" on October 14 . . . Meantime, they'll unveil a new revue next Tuesday. Dias and Diane, character dancers, will be the stars.

FOOD — IT'S WONDERFUL. You, too, may dine in Paris—by visiting La Salle du Bois right here in town. Among the impeccable items are onion soup, pigeon en casserole, cunning little profiterolles au chocolat . . . Steak Chateaubriand at the Muses will make all your palate buds sit up and laugh. You might top it off with some of their luscious homemade peach pie . . . which reminds that the homemade ravioli at the Pizzeria is also something mighty special . . . Lovers of good eating should never miss the Charsue Ding (barbecued pork with mushrooms, almonds and Chinese vegetables) at Ruby Foo's . . . Veal scallopini with crusty French bread and a glass of fine white wine—that's one of many epicurean meals to be selected at Ciro's . . . Roast duckling bigarade (with orange) is one of the masterpieces of Olmsted's Chef Roux . . . Now that the "r" months are here you can again enjoy beef with snow peas and oyster sauce at the Good Earth.

Dick Koons, former bandleader in the Mayflower Lounge, will make his bow as a solo pianist in the King Cole Room Monday, should fit into this smart spot nicely.

ARMORED MUSICIAN. Phil Wayne, new bandleader in the Carlton's Congo Room, was in the Fifth Armored Division during war time. When he wasn't riding around in a tank, he directed camp shows, did scores for such VIPs as Jascha Heifetz, Roz Russell and Joan Blondell.

THE PHILIPPINES ARE PROUD of Rodolfo Cornejo, their native son, now playing a masterly piano in Cafe Caprice. He's president of the National Federation of Musicians of the Philippines, is also regarded as the outstanding composer of the islands.

Chinese Prefer American Make-Up, Miss Wong Says

Chinese women developed the art of make-up centuries before it was popularized in other lands. Yet today they have discarded their ancient formulas and prefer Western creams, powders and perfumes.

"Most welcome present to a Chinese girl is a box of American make-up," says the Chinese actress, Anna May Wong, who is in Washington today to present a lecture on Oriental beauty, fashion and housekeeping customs. Miss Wong will be heard at 2:30 p. m. in the Congressional Room at the Statler Hotel.

Miss Wong was born in Los Angeles of Chinese parents and did not visit her ancestral home until she was an adult. Wearing Chinese dress for the first time in Shanghai, natives frequently whispered, "Who is that Western woman in Chinese clothes." But to our eyes she is Oriental looking, with smooth, ivory skin, shimmering black hair and slanting eyes.

Miss Wong spent a large part of her year in China doing research on the ancient traditions of personal grooming as practiced by the women who for centuries have been noted for their lovely skin and hair.

She found, for instance, that the Chinese woman has little need for creams, for an abundance of natural oils provide an ample supply to the skin, hair and nails, keeping them healthy and strong. Make-up is always removed with soap and water, a habit which Miss Wong believes would aid American women.

It is the practice of Chinese women to place perfume on the palms of the hands where it can spread fragrance as one talks or gestures. Another favorite grooming trick is to use fresh, fragrant flowers, such as jasmine or Chinese water lilies in the hair.

Husband Tries to Reform Wife, With Usual Results

The plaintiff is an old friend of mine, so we'll just call him Tim. He says:

"My wife came to Washington eight months ago, from Boston. Her English was pretty good when she got here, but now she's picked up a local affliction that is causing me untold grief.

"She can hardly get a sentence out of her mouth without saying either 'you know' or 'I mean.'

"We tried having her drop nickels in a penalty box whenever she used these phrases, but I couldn't afford to have her continue. She began borrowing from me to pay the box.

"Any suggestions?"

You know, Tim—I think your best bet is to get accustomed to those phrases. I mean, after all—men never succeed in these things, so why knock yourself out?

You Know What I Mean?

NAKED TRUTH

Henry O. Parsons of 1010 25th st. nw. sends me the following clipping, and remarks that newspapers these days seem to limit themselves to "bare facts":

"Police have little to go on. They have a description of the killer as he fled from the rear of the house. But witnesses who saw the slayer escape got only a fleeting glimpse. They know that he was wearing a white shirt, and not much else."

RUT? IT'S A TRENCH

True to the practices of her sex, Billie Turner of 4226 7th st. nw. seems determined to:

1. Change the ways of menfolks, and

2. Have the last word.

True to the practices of my own sex, I'll resist the first and concede the second. Billie writes:

"Now Mary Gilbert has joined the ranks of the purists in the argument over Chopin and Cugat.

"I'd be the last person to charge that either of you are 'wrong' if you don't like to rumba to Chopin. I used to be a purist once, myself."

"But I didn't know what I was missing. And you won't, either, until you include in your cultural development that really wonderful experience of learning to rumba.

"Come on, Bill—climb out of that rut."

WHAT'S MY NAME?

So far our Weatherbird's plea for help has served only to confuse the poor little guy still further.

His papa Dave Groves has been trying to find a suitable name for the Weatherbird, and some suggestions have already arrived.

Now both Dave and the bird are pacing the floor, trying to decide on the best one.

Send your suggestions to: Weatherbird, The Washington Post, 1337 E st. nw., Washington, 4, D. C.

PARTY LINER

Mary Barbour, principal of the John Marshall School in Arlington, tells this story about one of her pupils.

The little girl is the daughter of a very prominent Democrat. When Daddy asked her one day how things were going at school, she replied:

"Oh, pretty good. But I don't think you'd approve of something that they make us say every morning."

"What's this?" inquired the shocked father. "What do they make you say?"

"Every morning when we salute the flag we have to say, 'I pledge allegiance to the flag, and to the Republicans for which it stands'."

Grin and Bear It

"When you sneak out later for coffee, Snodgrass, will you bring me back some cigars?"

Leonard Lyons

When Bevin Thought He Had a Tip

NEW YORK.—Out of the blue, and in the week when the American press was reporting of the British bludgeoning of the suffering remnants of the most victimized people in Europe, Ernest Bevin would not have asked for the Fort Knox gold, unless he had received some unique, confidential advice . . .

It began with a Yale professor who had been expounding a new theory on foreign loans—loaning, not money but gold, as a commodity to be returned in kind when the mines of South Africa produce it. One of those to whom he mentioned it was George Ball, a lawyer. Ball reported this while he was in England, to a friend of Bevin who passed it along. That's why Bevin, believing this to be a semi-official hint that America would be receptive, asked for the gold—on the day the British troops were cleaning their bludgeons after using them on the D.P.s of the Runnymede Park, the ship named for the place where the Magna Carta was born.

During the war, in a food-conservation broadcast, the late Fiorello LaGuardia suggested that the used grounds of coffee should be dried thoroughly and then used again the next day. The mayor promised that this would produce good coffee . . . The next week LaGuardia broadcast a retraction, confessing that he had tried it and it didn't work. "Forget it," he counseled . . .

He never revealed that in addition to his desire for truth, this confession was brought on by the fact that to his home, by mail, express and parcel post, from indignant housewives had come more than 5000 pounds of used, dried-over coffee grounds.

Frank Sinatra is developing his painting and spends long hours at the easel. He sent one of his oils to his manager, George Evans, who was puzzled at seeing a canvas completely covered with black paint except for the upper left hand corner which showed a light in a tiny window . . . Evans thanked the donor-artist, and asked: "By the way, Frank, what's it supposed to be?" . . . "That's a picture," said Sinatra, "of a wartime blackout—but some dope left his light on."

The most startling Broadway news of the week is that Lou Holtz—after 30 years of reciting the same stories—is going to change his act. He's paying a $3000 advance and 10 per cent of his salary to three writers for specialty songs and gag-routines.

At a cocktail party given by Whit Burnett this week John Gunther was found fervently embracing Burnett with one arm and the Countess Waldeck with the other. Gunther told them how delighted he was that they both are in such good health. "I have a special anxiety for these two to live a long, long time," said Gunther, "because they are the sole surviving witnesses who can attest to my most exciting experience. They played in a poker game in which I drew a Royal Flush."

Michael Fielding, composer of "I Was Waiting For A Dream," was the first violinist for Leopold Stokowski in Philadelphia.. He once asked Stokowski for advice regarding his career as a long-hair musician. "First, always dress well," Stokowski began. "How you look is almost as important as how you play. Then," continued Stokowski, "when you practice, do so before a large mirror. And finally," Stokowski concluded, "marry the right woman."

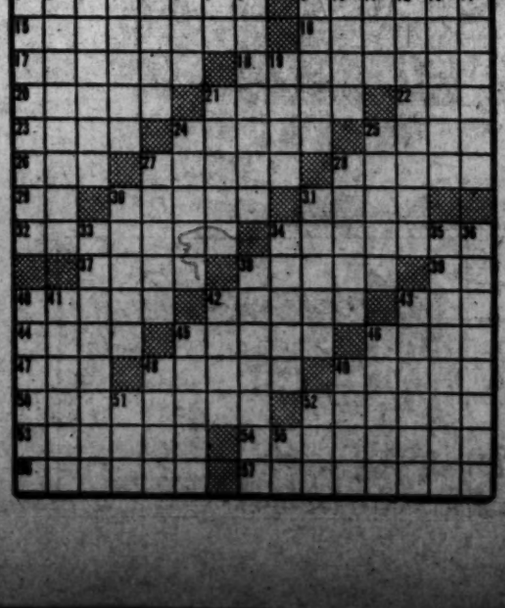
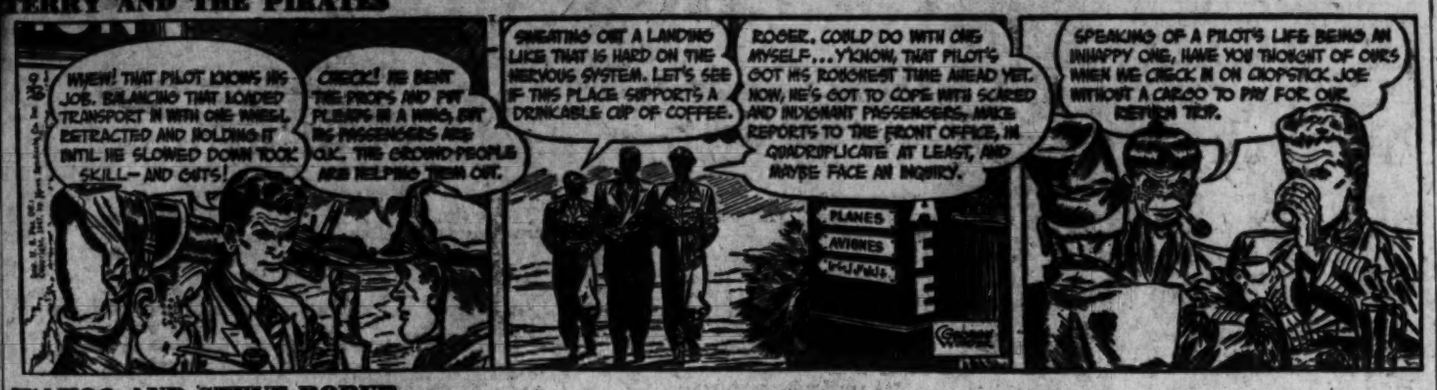
Solution to Yesterday's Puzzle



TERRY AND THE PIRATES



WHEW! THAT PILOT KNOWS HIS JOB. BALANCING THAT LOADED TRANSPORT IN WITH ONE WHEEL RETRACTED AND HOLDING IT UNTIL HE SLOWED DOWN TOOK SKILL—AND GUTS!
CHECK! HE BENT THE PROPS AND PAY PLENTY IN A WING, BUT HIS PASSENGERS ARE O.K. THE GROUND PEOPLE ARE HELPING THEM OUT.
SWEATING OUT A LANDING LIKE THAT IS HARD ON THE NERVOUS SYSTEM. LET'S SEE IF THIS PLACE SUPPORTS A DRINKABLE CUP OF COFFEE.
ROGER. COULD DO WITH ONE MYSELF...Y'KNOW, THAT PILOT'S GOT HIS ROUGHEST TIME AHEAD YET. NOW, HE'S GOT TO COPE WITH SCARED AND INDIGNANT PASSENGERS, MAKE REPORTS TO THE FRONT OFFICE, IN QUADRUPLICATE AT LEAST, AND MAYBE FACE AN INQUIRY.
PLANES
ANTONES
SPEAKING OF A PILOT'S LIFE BEING AN UNHAPPY ONE, HAVE YOU THOUGHT OF OURS WHEN WE CHECK IN ON CROPSTICK JOE WITHOUT A CARGO TO PAY FOR OUR RETURN TRIP.
